

2026 Iran war

Since 28 February 2026, the United States and Israel have been engaged in a war with Iran and its regional allies. The conflict began when the US and Israel launched airstrikes on Iran, targeting military and government sites and assassinating several Iranian officials, including Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei. The surprise attacks were launched during negotiations between Iran and the US regarding Iran's nuclear program. Iran responded with missile and drone strikes on Israel, US bases, and US-allied Arab countries in West Asia; and the closure of the Strait of Hormuz, disrupting global trade.

After the Middle Eastern crisis began in 2023, Iran and Israel exchanged missile strikes in 2024, and again during the Twelve-Day War in June 2025, which resulted in a US airstrike on Iranian nuclear sites. In January 2026, Iranian security forces massacred thousands of civilians in their crackdown on the largest Iranian protests since 1979. US president Donald Trump responded by threatening military action and starting the largest US military buildup in the region since the 2003 US-led invasion of Iraq.^[67]

Israeli–US airstrikes damaged military bases, government buildings, schools, hospitals, and heritage sites and resulted in civilian casualties.^[68] In retaliation, Iran launched hundreds of drones and ballistic missiles at Israel, US military bases in the region, and at neighbouring Arab countries including Bahrain, Jordan, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, and the United Arab Emirates.^{[69][70]} Iran and its proxies launched strikes on Iraq's Kurdistan. Drones or missiles also appeared to target Azerbaijan, Turkey, and Britain's Akrotiri military base on Cyprus.^[71] The conflict between Hezbollah and Israel escalated into the 2026 Lebanon war, killing more than 2,000 civilians and militants.^{[72][73]} Iran has since restricted internet access to its people, allowing access only for government-approved users.

The Trump administration gave diverse explanations for starting the war:^[74] to forestall Iranian retaliation after an expected Israeli attack,^{[75][76][77][78]} to stop an imminent Iranian threat, to destroy Iran's missile

The war's economic impact includes the world's biggest oil supply disruption since the 1970s energy crisis,^[95] surges in oil and gas prices, disruptions in aviation and tourism, and volatility in financial markets. Oil and gas shipments were disrupted by Iran's closure of the Hormuz Strait and Israeli and Iranian attacks on energy facilities.^{[96][97][98]} On 19 March, the cost of the war to the US military was estimated at US$18 billion,^[99] and the Pentagon requested a further US$200 billion.^[100] By 31 March, the cost to Arab countries was estimated at over US$120 billion.^[101] The Iranian government assessed the damage to their own economy as at least $300 billion and possibly as much as $1 trillion by 11 April.^[102] The US, Israel and Iran all implemented censorship to hide the damage they had suffered.

US president Donald Trump controversially claimed victory several times^{[103][104]} and claimed the Iranian military had been destroyed.^{[105][106]} Trump then repeatedly threatened to destroy Iran's infrastructure and "civilization" if they did not make a deal with the US and re-open the Strait of Hormuz.^{[107][108]} Iran, the US and Israel agreed to a two-week ceasefire brokered by Pakistan, beginning on 8 April.^[109] The ceasefire came under strain as Iran refused to re-open the Hormuz strait, blaming the Israeli strikes in Lebanon.^[110] After the failure of the Islamabad Talks, Trump said he no longer cared about negotiations,^[111] and announced a naval blockade of Iran from 13 April.^[112] A ceasefire in Lebanon began on 16 April.^[113] Iran announced that commercial shipping

Background

Iran's relations with the United States and Israel

A US- and UK-backed coup d'état in 1953 deposed Iranian prime minister Mohammad Mosaddegh due to his nationalization of the oil industry, strengthening the rule of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Israel maintained ties with Iran as part of its alliance of the periphery strategy. Resentment of the Shah's deference to Western interests and his autocratic rule led to the 1979 revolution in which Pahlavi was overthrown and replaced by an Islamic republic.^{[125][126]} Iran severed diplomatic ties with the US and Israel and held the American embassy staff hostage for over a year.^{[127][128]}

During the Iran–Iraq War, the US supported Iraq. In 1988, a US warship was struck by an Iranian mine; the US responded by attacking Iran's navy. A few months later, the US mistakenly shot down a civilian Iranian flight.^[129] Iran started a ballistic missile program to deter Iraqi missile attacks on Iranian cities and to compensate for its lack of a modern air force due to sanctions.^{[130][131]}

Starting in the 1980s, Iran began engaging in proxy conflicts throughout the Middle East. Iran backed Hezbollah in Lebanon against Israel during and after the Lebanese Civil War. During the Iraq War, Iran supported militias fighting the US in Iraq. Along with the Houthis in Yemen and other groups in Syria and Palestine, these proxy groups became part of the informal 'Axis of Resistance' committed to countering American, Israeli, Saudi, and Emirati influence in the region.

In 2002, Iran's covert expansion of its nuclear program was first revealed. Beginning in 2006, the United Nations Security Council responded with a series of sanctions against Iran, with the US imposing its own series of sanctions against Iran. The US and Israel conducted a campaign of cyberwarfare against Iranian nuclear facilities to disrupt their operations, while Israel assassinated several top Iranian nuclear scientists.^{[129][132]} The conflict escalated in January 2020 when President Trump ordered the assassination of Qasem Soleimani, the commander of the Quds Force.^{[127][131]}

Tensions escalated following the October 7 attacks on Israel and the start of the Gaza war. Israel fought Iran-backed militias across the Middle East, including Hamas^[z], Hezbollah, and the Houthis. Israeli strikes on the Iranian consulate in Damascus and the assassination of Ismail Haniyeh were met with Iranian strikes on Israel in April and October. In June 2025, Israel launched the Twelve-Day War by attacking Iranian military and nuclear facilities, provoking Iranian counter-strikes. The US also struck Iranian nuclear facilities during the Twelve-Day War, which ended in a ceasefire.^[135]

In early 2026, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu lobbied President Donald Trump for a joint military strike on Iran, specifically targeting its leadership.^[136] Following high-level meetings in February, Trump authorized "Operation Epic Fury", with reports citing Israeli intelligence provided by Netanyahu as a decisive factor in the decision.^[137]

Iran nuclear issue

Iran suspended its AMAD Project pursuant to Ali Khamenei's fatwa against nuclear weapons in 2003. Khamenei banned nuclear weapons of any kind.^{[138][139]} Iran said it was not seeking nuclear weapons, and that its enrichment efforts were to generate nuclear power for civilian use.^[140] UN Security Council (UNSC) concerns about Iran's nuclear program from 2006^[aa] led to the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA) between Iran and the US in 2015.^[144]

Despite Iran's compliance with the JCPOA,^[145] Trump withdrew the US from the deal in 2018,^[146] re-imposed sanctions, and adopted a "maximum pressure" strategy.^[147] The Biden administration kept most of these sanctions in place, further damaging Iran's economy.^[148] Trump continued the "maximum pressure" approach in his second term.^[149] In September 2025, the UN reimposed sanctions on Iran using the "snapback" mechanism, causing the currency to weaken, resulting in price increases for food supplies such as meat, rice, and other staples, freezing Iranian assets abroad, suspending arms transactions, and imposing penalties related to the country's ballistic-missile programme.^{[150][151]} Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent labelled the collapse of the Iranian currency in December 2025 as the strategy's "grand culmination".^{[152][153]} At his State of the Union Address on 24 February 2026, Trump claimed that Iran had restarted its nuclear program and was developing missiles capable of striking the US.^[154] Trump's claims about Iran rebuilding its nuclear program and developing long-range ballistic missiles have contradicted both his previous claims that Iran's nuclear program was "obliterated" and US intelligence reports that Iran did not pose any military threat towards the US and needed until 2035 to build such missiles were it to do so.^[155]

A few days later, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) reported that Iran had stored highly enriched uranium in an underground facility that was undamaged by US bombings in 2025.^[156] Subsequently, Iran denied the IAEA access to nuclear facilities that had been bombed, but did provide access at least once to all unaffected facilities since June 2025.^[157] Mohammad Eslami, the head of the Atomic Energy Organization of Iran, said Iran would not permit inspections of facilities struck by the US until the IAEA established rules for the post-war situation, insisting on codified protocols for internationally protected facilities subjected to military attacks, and that the IAEA condemn the attacks.^[158]

In February 2026, Iran informed the IAEA that normal safeguards were "legally untenable and materially impracticable," as a result of threats and "acts of aggression," leaving the IAEA unable to verify whether Iran had suspended enrichment or confirm the status of its current stockpile,^[157] though it found no evidence Iran was weaponizing.^[159] Analysts in the UK and US have characterized Iran's strategy as nuclear hedging, developing the technical infrastructure to assemble a weapon on short notice while stopping short of actual production.^[160] The Bulletin of Atomic Scientists said that Iran was using its enrichment program and uranium stockpiles for leverage in international negotiations, and was willing to dilute or export its higher-level enriched uranium in exchange for sanctions relief and prevention of future attacks.^[161]

Israel nuclear issue

Israel is widely believed to possess nuclear weapons, with a stockpile estimated between 90 and 400 nuclear warheads.^[172] Israel is the only nuclear-armed country that does not officially acknowledge its nuclear weapons capability.^[173] Some scholars have argued that Israel's nuclear weapons have incentivized Iran to develop its own nuclear program, seen as maintaining a balance of nuclear deterrence, or causing a regional nuclear arms race.^{[174][175][176][177]} Citing security threats, Israel rejects international calls to accede to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons or to participate in negotiations of a Middle East nuclear weapon free zone.^{[178][179][180]} This has frustrated both US^[173] and UK^[181] diplomatic efforts on such a zone. Scholars also suggest US tacit acceptance of the Israeli nuclear weapons capability is seen as a double standard that undermines its diplomatic credibility in Middle East nonproliferation negotiations.^{[182][173][183]}

Prelude

Tensions between Iran and the United States over Iran's nuclear program began to intensify in January 2026 amid Iran's massacres of Iranian civilians in their crackdown of the 2025–2026 anti-government protests.^[184] The US and Iran began indirect negotiations in February in Oman, but produced no agreement. The US began amassing air and naval assets in the region at a level not seen since the outset of the 2003 US-led invasion of Iraq. The US government signaled that airstrikes remained an option, emphasizing that all responses were under consideration while maintaining that diplomacy was still preferred.^[185] US president Donald Trump and his administration officials like Vice President JD Vance, Secretary of State Marco Rubio, and Special Envoy Steve Witkoff all accused Iran of building up its nuclear and missile programs to threaten the United States and its interests. Iran in turn accused the US of waging "disinformation and misinformation" campaigns against it.^{[186][187][188][189]}

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu successfully lobbied the Trump administration for military intervention.

Regional actors, including Qatar, cautioned that any escalation could have severe consequences for the Middle East. Negotiations regarding the Iranian nuclear program were held in February, and on 28 February 2026 the US and Israel conducted military strikes in Iran.^[190]

Hostilities

First week (28 February – 6 March)

On 27 February at 3:38 p.m. EST (11:08 p.m. IRST), Donald Trump, traveling on Air Force One to Corpus Christi, Texas, gave the order to proceed with Operation Epic Fury.^{[191][192]} US missiles, drones, and Israeli fighter jets began striking Iran the next day, around 9:45 a.m. IRST (1:15 a.m. EST).^{[193][194]} The strikes took place during active negotiations over Iran's nuclear program.^{[195][196]} The attacks coincided with the holy month of Ramadan, during which Muslims fast from dawn to sunset.^[197]

28 February: Trump addresses the nation about the strikes.

The operation was codenamed Operation Roaring Lion^[ab] by Israel.^{[198][199]} The Israeli Air Force (IAF) said that it had struck 500 military targets in western and central Iran in the largest combat sortie in its history.^[200] Iranian naval vessels were also targeted.^[201] Israel later said its initial strikes used over 1,200 bombs in 24 hours.^[202] A US official said dozens of US strikes were carried out by planes based around the Middle East and from one or more aircraft carriers.^[203]

According to Iran International, quoting the Iranian Students' News Agency, thousands of Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) personnel, including several senior officials,^[204] were killed or wounded as several military bases were attacked.^[205] Several strikes hit Tehran's Pasteur Street district, where the presidential palace is, and the National Security Council.^{[206][207]}

27 February: US aircraft sit on the flight deck of USS Abraham Lincoln

The strikes were coupled with cyberattacks on Iranian infrastructure, media, and phone apps, with messages calling on Iranians to rise up against their government.^{[208][209][210]} The cyberattacks resulted in a near-total internet blackout in Iran, lasting over 60 hours with connectivity dropping to as low as 1% of normal levels, disrupting government communications, state media, and public services.^{[211][209]} Iran has since restricted internet access to its people, allowing access only for government-approved users.^{[212][213]}

Israeli military officials said months-long planning preceded their strikes, allowing them to pinpoint their targets, attain "tactical surprise", and gain US support.^[214] Attacking during the morning, rather than at night which was when most of Israel's previous attacks on Iran took place, added to the element of surprise.^[215] After the strikes began, Israel declared a state of emergency, citing expectation of an Iranian retaliation, and warned its citizens to remain in protected areas.^{[216][217]} Israel called up 20,000 reservists in addition to the 50,000 already on duty.^[218] The Israeli Ministry of Health moved its hospital operations underground.^[219] Israel warned Iranian civilians residing near military industries and infrastructure to evacuate immediately.^[205]

At 2:30 a.m. EST on 28 February, Donald Trump released an eight-minute video statement on Truth Social, saying that the purpose of the US strikes in Iran was effectively regime change. Trump said that Iran's "menacing activities" endangered the US and its allies. He cited the Iran hostage crisis, support for proxies such as Hamas and Hezbollah, and its killings of protesters.^[220] Trump cited Iran calling "Death to America" and its alleged history of attacking US civilians and soldiers as evidence of Iran's intent against the United States.^{[79][221]}

Trump and Benjamin Netanyahu both warned of the potential threat of nuclear weapons in Iran and called on the Iranian people to overthrow their government.^{[220][222]} The Times of Israel reported that Defense Minister Israel Katz labeled the strikes a "pre-emptive attack" intended to "remove threats to the State of Israel".^[216] Iran rejected claims that it intended to attack the United States, citing the aggressive posture of the US armed forces as evidence.^[86]

Iranian forces reacted within hours by launching missiles and drones. Iran codenamed its military response Operation True Promise IV.^{[ac][ad]} Iranian state media also dubbed the events as the Ramadan War,^[ae] as the US-Israeli attacks coincided with the holy month of Ramadan.^[223]

Iran struck Israeli targets in Tel Aviv and Haifa^[224] as well as multiple countries throughout the Persian Gulf region.^[225] Major targets included Bahrain's capital Manama,^{[226][227]} Kuwait International Airport, the United Arab Emirates' capital Abu Dhabi,^{[228][229]} Riyadh and Eastern Province in Saudi Arabia,^[230] and Erbil International Airport and the US Consulate General in Erbil in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq.^[231]

Major US military bases and installations in the Middle East, including bases used during the strikes

Iran reported striking the US bases of Al Udeid Air Base in Qatar, Ali Al Salem Air Base in Kuwait,^[232] Al Dhafra Air Base in the UAE, and the US Navy Fifth Fleet headquarters in Bahrain.^[233] Local sources said Iran used Shahed drones, which are among the weapons most used by Iran and its proxies, including Hamas and Hezbollah.^[234] On 1 or 2 March, Iran struck the radar bases for US THAAD missile defense systems in Jordan, the UAE and Saudi Arabia, destroying at least one of them.^[235]

Israel launched a new wave of strikes against Iranian targets.^[236] Iran launched missiles and drones on Bahrain, Israel, Jordan, Kuwait, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, and the UAE.^{[237][238]} The United Kingdom reported "two missiles fired in the direction of Cyprus", but that they "don't believe they were targeted at Cyprus". However, the presidents of Cyprus and Northern Cyprus both denied the claims that any missiles were fired at Cyprus.^{[239][240][241]} Two oil tankers, the Palau-flagged Skylight and the Marshall Islands-flagged MKD VYOM, were targeted off the coast of Oman.^{[242][243][244]} Shipping through the Strait of Hormuz slowed to a standstill,^[245] with 150 freight ships, including many oil tankers, stalled.^[246]

To avert further Iranian strikes, the E3 (the UK, France, and Germany) resolved to back, if needed, "proportionate military defensive measures" against drones and ballistic missiles, signaling the potential for direct involvement.^[247] British prime minister Keir Starmer said that US can use British bases for "defensive" strikes on Iran^[248] and disclosed that Ukrainian and other specialists would aid Gulf efforts to foil Iranian drone strikes.^[249] CNN reported that Saudi Crown Prince Salman, with US backing, vowed to employ military force against further Iranian incursions, calling Iranian strikes "cowardly" due to Saudi airspace being closed to US and Israeli attackers.^[250] On 1 March, Trump announced that the US had accepted an Iranian proposal to further negotiations.^[251] However, Ali Larijani subsequently ruled out talks.^[252]

Trump issued letters to Congress leaders according to the 1973 War Powers Resolution.^[253]

On 2 March, the US embassy in Kuwait was struck and subsequently closed indefinitely; no casualties were reported.^{[254][255]} The US-flagged tanker Stena Imperative and the Honduras-flagged tanker Athe Nova were also struck.^[256] A senior official and advisor to the IRGC commander said he would set fire to any ship coming through the Strait of Hormuz, and added that no oil will leave the area.^[257]

Qatar shot down two Iranian Su-24 bombers, making it the first nation to shoot down an Iranian aircraft in the conflict.^[258] The Qatari Ministry of Defense announced that Ras Laffan Industrial City and Mesaieed Industrial Area were struck by two Iranian drones.^[259] On 6 March, it was reported that according to satellite imagery analysis by both Bloomberg and the Energy Economics and Society Research Institute in Tokyo, Ras Laffan, the main gas facility in Qatar, appeared to have not been damaged before the "unprecedented shutdown" which sent fuel prices higher.^[260]

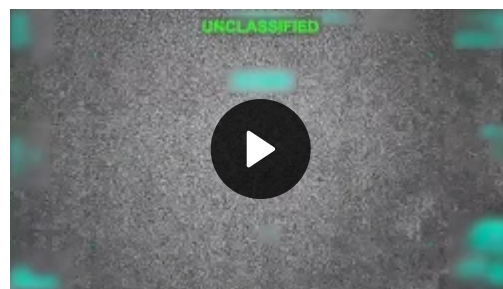

The United States and Israel attacked the Natanz Nuclear Facility^[261] and the Iranian media reported damage to the Khatam-al-Anbia and Gandhi hospitals.^[262] A friendly fire incident took place when the pilot of an F/A-18 of the Kuwait Air Force shot down three US F-15E fighters.^{[263][264][265][255]} Israel and Hezbollah exchanged strikes.^[266] Hezbollah began firing rockets and missiles on Israel in retaliation for the killing of Khamenei.^{[267][268]} Hezbollah later claimed that the attack was a "defensive act" after over a year of Israeli attacks despite a 2024 truce.^[269] It added that it restarted fighting to force Israel to stop its aggression and evacuate from seized Lebanese territories, emphasizing that the move was unrelated to the war.^[270]

Lebanon banned military activities by Hezbollah after the attacks.^[271] An IDF spokesperson issued an emergency statement stating that the attack is to be considered "an official declaration of war by Hezbollah", vowing to "neutralize" the threat.^[266] Israel struck southern Lebanon,^{[272][273][274]} Beirut, and the Beqaa Valley.^[266] The IDF said that it killed the head of Hezbollah's intelligence headquarters Hussein Makled in the strikes.^{[275][276]} In Lebanon, the IDF killed Adham Adnan al-Othman, the head of Palestinian Islamic Jihad's armed wing, Al-Quds Brigades, in Lebanon.^[277]

The Royal Air Force station at Akrotiri, Cyprus, was targeted by a drone strike around midnight local time, with one causing minor damage.^{[278][279][280][281]} Another strike on Cyprus led to Greece announcing that they would deploy frigates and F-16s to defend Cyprus from any further strikes by Iran.^[282] The pro-Iran militant group Guardians of the Blood Brigade claimed responsibility for attacks on the US Victory Base near Baghdad International Airport and Erbil, Kurdistan Region, Iraq.^{[50][283][284]} The Islamic Resistance in Iraq claimed responsibility for over 23 drone strikes on US assets in Erbil.^[285]

On 3 March, US and Israeli strikes reportedly destroyed the Supreme National Security Council (SNSC) headquarters,^[286] the Expediency Discernment Council building in Tehran,^[287] and what Israeli officials described as an underground nuclear weapons facility called Min Zada.^[288] The proximity of these strikes to the Bushehr Nuclear Power Plant (about 12 km (7.5 mi) away) prompted the Russian agency Rosatom to suspend construction on new units and evacuate non-essential staff due to a loss of communication with Iranian officials.^[289]

US officials said US forces severely damaged Iran's naval capabilities, mainly in the Gulf of Oman, where several Iranian warships have reportedly been destroyed and key bases hit.^{[290][291]} Debris from an airstrike damaged Golestan Palace, a UNESCO World Heritage Site,^[292] causing UNESCO to issue a statement that damaging UNESCO property is against international law.^[293]

Israel Katz authorized a ground invasion of Lebanon on 3 March.^{[294][295]} They were later followed by a ground incursion in southern Lebanon with forces from the 91st Division with the goal to establish a "security layer" for the Israeli residents of northern settlements against Hezbollah, expecting to destroy their infrastructure in the Israel-Lebanon border. The Lebanese government reported that such Israeli preventive attacks reached Kfarkela and Qouzah, provoking the Lebanese army to do a redeployment from newly established border posts amid escalating Israeli activity in violation of the 2024 Israel–Lebanon ceasefire agreement.^[296] Israel also reported that it killed Daoud Alizadeh, the commander of the Quds Force's Lebanon branch, in Tehran.^[297]

Western diplomats and other sources told The Jerusalem Post that Qatar had struck Iran after Iran had attempted to strike Doha's airport and Qatar shot down two Iranian Su-24 bombers;^[298] Channel 12 also reported Qatari strikes.^[299] Qatari Foreign Ministry spokesperson Majed al-Ansari denied the accusation that Qatar had joined the "campaign targeting Iran".^[300] An IRGC general warned it would hit all economic hubs in the Middle East,^{[301][302]} and Abbas Araghchi said that any defensive European military involvement would be considered an act of war.^{[303][304]}

An Israeli Air Force F-35I "Adir" shot down an Iranian Yak-130, the first kill of a crewed aircraft by an F-35.

On 4 March, US secretary of state Marco Rubio announced that the US-Israeli attacks on Iran would increase in their intensity.^[305] Israel attacks hit the Basij headquarters.^[306] Mojtaba Khamenei survived an airstrike.^[307] The IDF announced that an F-35I "Adir" shot down a Russian-made Iranian Yak-130 fighter jet over Tehran, the first time that an F-35 has ever shot down a crewed fighter jet in air-to-air combat and the first time the Israeli Air Force shot down an aircraft since 1985.^[308]

Iran launched strikes against the Al Udeid Air Base,^[309] as well as Aramco's Ras Tanura oil refining facility.^[310] The United States

ordered the evacuation of non-essential workers in Cyprus in anticipation of Iranian strikes and issued a travel warning for the country.^{[311][312]} A ballistic missile launched from Iranian territory was intercepted by NATO integrated air defense systems as it entered Turkish airspace, marking a significant escalation in the regional conflict.^[313] Turkey asserted its right to self-defense after the missile landed in Dörtyol, Hatay Province,^[314] and NATO secretary general Mark Rutte stated that the alliance was committed to defending Turkey.^[315]

An Iranian Navy frigate, IRIS Dena, was sunk in the Indian Ocean by United States Navy submarine USS Charlotte, about 40 nautical miles (74 km; 46 mi) south of Galle, Sri Lanka. The vessel was returning to Iran following its participation in the International Fleet Review 2026 and the multilateral Exercise MILAN at Visakhapatnam, India.^{[316][317][318]} The exercise required participating ships not to carry any ammunition, and the US likely knew the Dena was defenseless, since it also sent a maritime patrol aircraft to participate.^[319] It was the first ship sunk by a submarine in active combat since the Falklands War, and the first by an American submarine since World War II.^{[af][322]} According to the Iranian army, 104 Iranians were killed and 32 were injured from this attack.^[323]

The government of Azerbaijan said on 5 March that two drones from Iran struck Azerbaijan's Nakhchivan exclave^[324] damaging an airport and injuring two civilians.^[325] Keir Starmer confirmed that the UK's bases on Cyprus would be used to defend the airspace of Jordan from Iranian drones,^{[326][327]} while Italy, the Netherlands and Spain confirmed that they would be sending warships to defend Cyprus.^{[328][329][330]} Ireland stated that they would be willing to protect Cyprus and join the European defense coalition that had mobilized around the island if requested.^[331] The IDF killed Hamas official Wassim Attallah al-Ali in Beddawi, Lebanon.^[332]

Trump said on 6 March that there are "no time limits" for how long the war will continue for,^[333] and Hegseth stated that the war has "only just begun".^[334] The Iranian tanker IRIS Bushehr was interned by the Sri Lanka Navy, marking the first instance of a warship being interned in a neutral country since World War II.^[335]

Second week (7–13 March)

Six dead US soldiers from the 2026 Port Shuaiba drone attack are transferred to the US on 7 March 2026.

On 7 March, the US sent a third aircraft carrier, USS George H. W. Bush, to the Middle East.^{[336][337][338]} The British aircraft carrier HMS Prince of Wales was placed on advanced readiness to defend British interests in the region.^[339] Pezeshkian told reporters on 7 March that Iran would stop striking neighbors from 7 March onwards unless an attack originated from there.^[340] Despite this, Dubai International Airport was later attacked by Iranian drones.^[341] NDTV reported that following a week's hostilities, Iran might only have around one thousand ballistic missiles left.^[342] On 7 March, ballistic missiles were fired from Bahrain toward Iran, likely by US forces.^[343]

6 March: The aftermath of US-Israeli airstrikes in Tehran

On 8 March, Khamenei's second son, Mojtaba, was designated as Iran's new supreme leader.^[344] Also on 8 March, US Central Command posted a message on X in Persian and Arabic which "strongly urge[s] civilians in Iran to stay at home" and alleging that "[t]he Iranian regime is knowingly endangering innocent lives by using heavily populated civilian areas to conduct military operations, including launching one-way attack drones and ballistic missiles".^[345]

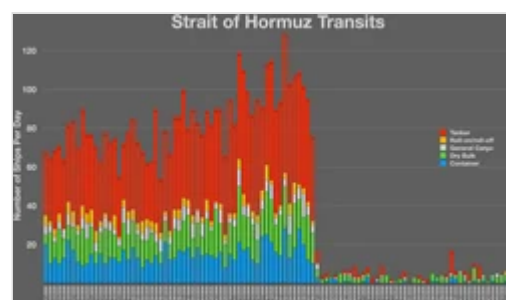

Israeli airstrikes hit some of Iran's oil storage facilities, killing four people.^[346] Strikes on fuel depots near Tehran caused a "river of fire" to pour out along the streets in the surrounding area,^[347] and the city became engulfed in a cloud of thick black smoke, causing black toxic acidic rain to fall in the surrounding area.^[348] Residents were advised by Iranian authorities to stay indoors, wear masks when outside, and conserve food and fuel.^[349] Kuwait reported that two of its officers were killed while performing duties.^{[350][351]} The Saudi Civil Defense agency said that a strike on a compound in Al-Kharj killed two people and injured 12 others.^[352] US Central Command announced the death of a seventh US service member from an Iranian attack.^[353]

The United Kingdom's Ministry of Defense confirmed that its forces had intercepted an Iranian drone headed towards Iraq. Additionally, the Ministry declared their intention to send a Merlin helicopter to the region to help aid in detecting future aerial threats.^[354] According to the Iranian Red Crescent Society, a total of 65 schools and

32 medical facilities (such as hospitals and pharmacies) have been targeted since the war started, and more than 10,000 civilian sites have been damaged.^[355] On 9 March, NATO confirmed the interception of a second ballistic missile over Turkish air space,^[356] landing in the area of Gaziantep.^[357] Meanwhile, Turkey deployed six F-16s and air defence systems to Northern Cyprus to ensure its security.^[358]

Trump claimed that "the war is very complete, pretty much", after speaking with Russian president Vladimir Putin,^[359] and said "we already won the war in many ways."^[360] He additionally claimed that the Strait of Hormuz was open but also expressed interest in taking it over from Iran.^[361] Trump later went back on some of his comments during a press conference held later that day, supporting Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth in stating that the war was just the "beginning of building a new country" and that it would end "soon".^[362] However, Trump also said that the US will have the "most intense day" of strikes on Tuesday.^[363] Following Syrian president Ahmed al-Sharaa's support for the Lebanon's objective to disarm Hezbollah,^[364] the group targeted the city of Inkhil in Syria.^[365] About a dozen B-1B bombers arrived at bases in Europe. Five landed at the Fairford Royal Air Force base, UK, joining three B-52 bombers, while three others were redirected to Ramstein Air Base, Germany.^[366]

GPS jamming of uncertain origin has disrupted navigation of ships near the Strait of Hormuz, which may lead to disastrous accidents for oil tankers.^[368] The United States Department of State (supported by Saudi Arabia)^[369] designated the Muslim Brotherhood branch in Sudan (a Sudanese Islamist organization) as a terrorist organization due to its nexus with the Axis of Resistance.^[370] Members of their militia fought alongside the IRGC due to the contacts established with the Al-Bara' ibn Malik Battalion during the Iranian intervention in Sudan.^[371] On 10 March, a senior IRGC commander stated that Iran was only firing missiles with payloads of 1,000 kg or more.^[372] AFP reported that Iran's attacks were the "most intense and heaviest" since the start of the war.^[373] This shows a shift in tactics from saturating air defences to high-impact penetration strikes.^[372] On the same day, top American general Dan Caine acknowledged that Iran was fighting back, but not harder than the U.S. expected before the war.^[374]

Strait of Hormuz transits dropped significantly since the start of the war.^[367]

Following the Syrian presidency's support for the disarmament of Hezbollah and a campaign of mobilization by the Syrian army on the Lebanese border,^{[364][375]} shells from Lebanon landed in the town of Serghaya, 20 km (12 mi) from Damascus where the Syrian Armed Forces forces presided.^[376] The strikes were confirmed by the Operations Authority of the Syrian Army.^[377] Later in the day, Israel issued an urgent evacuation notice to southern suburbs of Beirut.^[378]

US admiral Brad Cooper reported that Iran's ballistic missile launch rate fell 90% from day one of the war and their drone launch rate fell 83%.^[379] Defense analyst AJ Jaff reported that the missile launch rate fell 92% (480 to 40) and the drone launch rate fell 92% (720 to 60).^[380] On 11 March 11 B-1 and three B-52 US bombers were deployed to RAF Fairford in the UK, where long-range photography showed bombs being prepared for loading. This followed US war secretary Pete Hegseth's statement that it was the "most intense day of strikes inside Iran", though the targets of the mission remain unknown.^[381]

A branch of Bank Sepah in Tehran was hit by a strike, prompting the IRGC to warn that in the future, they could retaliate by striking US or Israeli banks in the region.^[382] Iran hit Stryker, a US-based medical supply company with a cyber attack.^[383] On 12 March, UNICEF reported that more than 1,100 children were injured or killed (200 reportedly killed in Iran, 91 in Lebanon, 4 in Israel, and 1 in Kuwait), hundreds of thousands displaced, and millions unable to attend schools from the violence of the war since it started. It also noted that these numbers will likely increase.^[384]

Iranian deputy intelligence minister Akbar Ghaffari was killed in an airstrike.^[385] An Iranian attack set two oil tankers on fire off the Iraqi coast, killing one person and prompting Iraq to suspend all oil terminal operations.^[386] The historical Safavid-era building of Rashk-e Jenan, also known as the Rashk Palace, was destroyed by direct US-Israeli strikes.^[387] Other buildings that were damaged according to Ruhollah Seyed al-Asgari, the deputy director of cultural heritage for Isfahan province, include Chehel Sotoun pavilion, the Rakib Khaneh Mansion, the Timurid Hall, the Ashraf Hall and the windows of Ali Qapu palace.^[388] Many of the affected buildings and monuments were legally protected by the Blue Shield International,^[389] which called damaging such sites a war crime.^[390] Six French soldiers were injured in a drone strike at a base in Mala Qara, Iraqi Kurdistan. French president Emmanuel Macron announced on 13 March that one French soldier was killed in the attack.^[391]

Also on 13 March, to help deal with the economic costs of the war, the US temporarily lifted restrictions on the sale of Russian oil. However, oil prices have barely been affected by this.^[392] Iran announced a coordinated offensive by IRGC Navy, the Iranian Army, and Hezbollah against Israel and US bases.^[393] Israel reported that 58 people have been hospitalized due to injuries following a missile strike.^[392] Iran again targeted Gulf countries with missiles and drones, causing oil prices to rise. Bahrain reported attacks on fuel tanks. Two people were injured when a "hostile drone" struck a residential building in Kuwait. The Kuwaiti authorities also stated that defense equipment and the country's main international airport were attacked, and six power lines were reported to have gone out of service. AFP reported that explosions were heard in downtown Dubai. At the same time, the British Maritime Trade Operations Agency said a container ship was attacked 35 nautical miles (65 kilometers) north of Jebel Ali in the UAE. According to Al Jazeera Arabic, sirens went off in every city across Jordan.^[394]

Satellite imagery of black smoke rising from the Port of Salalah on 13 March during the 2026 Iranian strikes on Oman.

For the third time in the war, ballistic missiles entered Turkish air space and were intercepted, with explosions heard in the proximity of the city of Adana as well as sirens from Incirlik Air Base.^[395] Israel struck several IRGC checkpoints in Iran. According to Reuters, Israel attacked the checkpoints after receiving tip-offs by on the ground informants. Reuters also reported Israel had struck positions of the Basij used to suppress Iranian protests.^[396]

Third week (14–20 March)

As of the third week, analysts found little evidence of significant defections or desertions in the Iranian military;^[ag] military defections have been considered a necessary condition for regime change.^[406] The US conducted a large-scale attack on Kharg Island, a key oil export hub home to 90 percent of Iran's oil exports. Over 90 military sites were targeted while the oil infrastructure was not targeted "for reasons of decency", according to Trump. Oil prices have risen over 40 percent since the start of the war.^[407] According to CENTCOM, around 90 military targets were struck, while the island's oil infrastructure was not targeted.^[408] On 14 March, Kata'ib Hezbollah security commander Abu Ali al-Askari was killed in an airstrike in Baghdad, according to the group.^[409]

Kharg Island in 2015; the fires on the towers are a normal part of oil refining.

The first two floors of the Royal Tulip Al Rasheed Hotel in Baghdad's Green Zone were hit by a drone whilst hosting a European Union and Saudi Arabian delegation. The attack was not claimed by anyone; however, due to the proximity of a similar attack that had happened 48 hours earlier on the US embassy in Baghdad, there were suspicions of it being an Iranian attack.^[410]

On 16 March, both China and US-aligned NATO nations in Europe rejected Trump's call to provide military support to reopen the Strait of Hormuz.^{[411][412]} Trump rebuked his NATO allies, calling their decision a "very foolish mistake".^[413] On 17 March, Trump made a statement on Truth Social renouncing NATO's assistance, and unexpectedly, US allies in the Indo-Pacific, namely Japan, South Korea, and Australia, for refusing to join US-led attacks on Iran during the war.^{[414][415][416][417]} In the same statement, Trump declared that the United States "[does] not need the help of anyone" regarding the war.^[418]

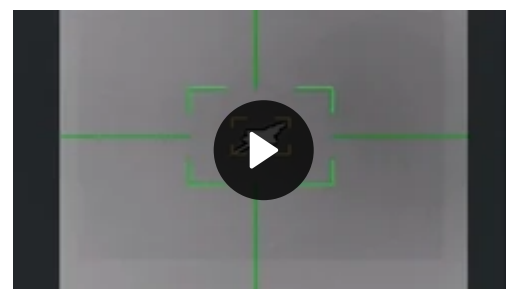

In the early morning of 17 March, several senior Iranian officials, including Ali Larijani and Basij chief Gholamreza Soleimani were targeted by Israeli airstrikes.^{[419][420]} Both their deaths were later confirmed by Iranian state media.^[421] In response, Iran launched a missile barrage that killed two Israeli civilians in Ramat Gan.^[422] The same day, Israel launched a ground invasion of southern Lebanon.^[423]

On 18 March, in a major escalation,^[424] Israel struck the South Pars natural gas field in the Persian Gulf and its neighboring refineries in Iran with US coordination.^[425] In retaliation, Iran attacked the world's largest LNG production facility in Qatar. Trump claimed he was not aware of the South Pars attack, promised that there would be no more Israeli attacks on Iranian oil infrastructure, and threatened Iran not to continue attacking Qatari energy infrastructure.^{[424][426]} On the same day, Israel said it had killed Iranian intelligence minister Esmail Khatib in an overnight airstrike.^[427] Pezeshkian confirmed Khatib's killing on the same day.^[428] A hair salon in Beit Awwa was struck by a projectile, killing four women and injuring six,^[429] with Israeli authorities stating that it was most likely cluster munitions and Palestinian authorities saying it was an errant Israeli interceptor.^{[430][431]}

On 19 March, a US F-35 made an emergency landing after a suspected hit by Iranian forces.^{[432][433]} A BAZAN Group refinery in Haifa was hit during a broader Iranian missile attack on the area as a retaliation for Israeli attacks on South Pars gas facilities.^{[434][435]} Netanyahu insisted that "You can't make a revolution from the air" and that "there must be a ground component — I won't share with you all the options", implying that there was a potential for limited assault operations involving soldiers on the ground in Iran.^[436] The US began an aerial campaign against Iranian vessels and drones in the Strait of Hormuz as part of an effort to reopen it to international shipping.^[437]

Fourth week (21–27 March)

Admiral Brad Cooper said that the US military had so far struck more than 8,000 Iranian military targets, including 130 vessels.^[438] On 21 March, the US conducted strikes on the Natanz Nuclear Facility using bunker buster bombs to target the site.^[439] Russia condemned the strikes on Natanz as a "blatant violation of international law," while the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) urged military restraint "to avoid any risk of a nuclear accident".^[440] In response, Iran struck the southern Israeli town of Dimona, injuring at least 78 people.^[441] Iran said that it targeted the Shimon Peres Negev Nuclear Research Center.^{[442][443]}

Citing unnamed US officials, CNN and The Wall Street Journal reported that Iran unsuccessfully attempted to strike the joint US–UK military base at Diego Garcia on the Chagos Islands in the British Indian Ocean Territory.^[444] The report said one of the missiles broke apart mid-flight, while another was intercepted by a SM-3

air defence missile launched by a US warship.^{[445][446]} Israel said that Iran used a two-stage intercontinental ballistic missile to target the island.^{[447][448]} Iran denied launching missiles towards Diego Garcia, saying that it was an Israeli false flag attack.^[449] No evidence has been presented that the alleged Iranian missiles neared Diego Garcia or that one was intercepted.^[450]

The Houthi movement in Yemen warned that it would respond to any escalation against Iran, including efforts to reopen the Strait of Hormuz. It specifically warned the two Arab countries offering to join the Strait of Hormuz campaign—Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates—that they "will be the first to lose in this battle".^[451] The Houthis further threatened to join the war in the event that US allies joined the attack on Iran or if the US and Israel used the Red Sea to carry out operations.^[452] Lebanon's government expelled the Iranian ambassador.^[453]

Israeli troops near the Lebanese border on 21 March 2026

Trump issued an ultimatum to Iran, threatening to strike its power plants unless it opened the Strait of Hormuz within 48 hours.^[454] Iran doubled down, threatening to "completely" close the Strait of Hormuz and strike vital infrastructure across the region such as energy and desalination facilities critical for drinking water.^[455] Iranian opposition figure and former crown prince Reza Pahlavi called on Trump and Netanyahu to target the military while sparing civilian infrastructure which "Iranians will need to rebuild our country".^[456] Halfway through the deadline, Trump announced that he was postponing strikes against Iranian power plants for five days,^[457] and said the US was negotiating with Iran to end the war.^[458] Iran denied the talks ever took place or were taking place and called the president "deceitful".^[459] Iran rejected the 15-point peace plan presented by the US.^{[460][461]} Iran asserted that Lebanon must be included as part of a ceasefire deal, thereby making a ceasefire conditional on an end to the 2026 Lebanon war against Hezbollah.^[462]

On 24 March, Israel or its allies shot down an Iranian missile crossing above Lebanon at high altitude, according to the Lebanese army, which also confirmed that the missile was not targeting Lebanon. This was the first time during the current conflict when a shootdown of an Iranian missile took place over Lebanese territory.^{[463][464]}

A US strike on the Habbaniya military base—which hosts units from the Popular Mobilization Forces—in Al Anbar Governorate killed seven members of the Iraqi Armed Forces and injured 13 others. In response, Iraqi prime minister Mohammed Shia' al-Sudani summoned the US embassy's chargé d'affaires in Baghdad.^[465] Iranian state media threatened that Iran could seize Bahraini and Emirati territory if the US "makes any mistakes", while signaling its readiness to open a new front in Yemen by closing the Bab al-Mandab with the Houthis.^{[466][467]} Israel said it killed Iran's top naval commander, Alireza Tangsiri, purportedly as part of an effort to reopen the Strait of Hormuz, which Katz said Tangsiri was "directly responsible" for the closure of.^{[468][469][470]}

On 27 March, a day after Trump and Hegseth announced the "neutralization" of Iran's military, an Iranian missile and drone strike on Prince Sultan Air Base damaged several US refueling aircraft and injured at least 15 US soldiers. An E-3 Sentry was also damaged by the strike.^{[471][472][473]} Military analyst Cedric Leighton described the attack as a "a serious blow to [US] surveillance capabilities".^[474] Iran showed no signs of ceding its control over the Strait of Hormuz.^[475] The same day, Iran blocked two Chinese ships from entering the strait and sought to formalize fees for ships passing through it.^{[476][477]} Despite pushes for talks, Israeli Defense Minister Israel Katz publicly vowed to "intensify and expand" Israeli attacks in Iran.^[478] The same day, the Shahid Khondab Heavy Water Complex in Arak, which has in the past been used to test uranium enrichment, and the Ardakan yellowcake production plant in Yazd Province were confirmed to have been damaged in Israeli airstrikes.^{[479][480]}

Fifth week (28 March – 3 April)

The Houthis joined the war on 28 March launching a ballistic missile towards Israel.^[481] The Houthis said that they had launched ballistic missiles targeting "sensitive" military sites in Israel, and vowed to continue the attacks "until the aggression on all resistance fronts stops". The missile was intercepted and no casualties were reported.^[482] The Houthis subsequently launched a second missile at Eilat.^[483] In response, the internationally recognized Yemeni government condemned Iran's "frequent attempts to drag Yemen" into conflict "through its terrorist militias".^[484] On the same day, 2,500 US marines from the 31st Marine Expeditionary Unit arrived in the Middle East. They are intended to be part of the effort to open the Strait of Hormuz.^[485]

US Central Command stated that it had struck over 11,000 targets in Iran since the beginning of the war. On 28 March, joint US–Israeli airstrikes severely damaged several residential and civilian facilities, including the Iran University of Science and Technology.^[486] In response, Iran threatened to attack Israeli and American colleges across the Middle East.^[487] Airstrikes also struck a 10,000-cubic-meter water reservoir in Haftkel, in Khuzestan province.^[488]

An Iranian missile struck a chemical plant in the Ne'ot Hovav industrial zone, injuring one person and causing fears of a hazardous leak.^[489] A convoy of the Iraqi Popular Mobilization Forces was seen entering Khorramshahr in southwestern Iran.^[490] Eleven-year-old child soldier Alireza Jafari died following an Israeli drone strike.^[491]

On 29 March, Trump stated that he would prefer to "take the oil in Iran". He proposed taking Iran's oil export center, Kharg Island, claiming that the United States could capture the territory "very easily", and implying that the US could occupy it for some time.^[80]

On 30 March, Trump said on Truth Social that if a deal was not reached soon and the Strait of Hormuz reopened, the US would conclude the war by destroying all of Iran's power plants, oil wells, Kharg Island, and possibly all its desalinization plants,^[492] although the feasibility and strategic value of some of Trump's threats were contested.^[493] On the same day Turkey and NATO intercepted the fourth missile directed towards Turkish territory. Iran denied firing a missile at Turkey, claiming that it was a false flag attack.^{[494][495]} The US began flying B-52 bombers over Iranian territory for the first time, indicating its confidence of air supremacy over Iran.^[496] The US used bombers to target an ammunition depot and air base in Isfahan, causing vast explosions.^[497] U.S.-allied Gulf states such as Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Kuwait, and Bahrain reportedly pushed Trump to continue the war until there are significant changes in Iran's leadership.^[498] American journalist Shelly Kittleon was kidnapped in Baghdad by Kata'ib Hezbollah—the strongest faction within the PMF—who demanded that the Iraqi government release several detained members of the group.^[499]

On 1 April, Mehr News Agency, a semi-official Iranian government news outlet, reported that policy expert and former foreign minister Kamal Kharazi was seriously injured and his wife was killed in an airstrike which hit his home.^[500] Iranian officials described the attack as an attempt to derail diplomacy, noting that Kharazi was overseeing a possible meeting between Iranian officials and US vice president JD Vance.^[501] Airstrikes on the strategically important Hengam Island in the Strait of Hormuz caused seven injuries.^[502] Trump indicated that he was no longer concerned about Iran's enriched uranium buried underground.^[503] Netanyahu asserted that the US–Israeli strikes have eliminated Iran's ability to produce nuclear weapons and ballistic missiles, thereby removing "two existential threats" to Israel.^[504] The Iranian president Pezeshkian published an open letter to US citizens.^[505]

Late in the day on 1 April, Trump made a speech addressing the nation, in which he said that the strikes have "dramatically curtailed" Iranian missile and drone systems, and added that the attacks on Iran will escalate over the next two to three weeks to "bring them back to the Stone Ages, where they belong".^[506]

On 2 April, two US strikes on the B1 bridge between Tehran and Karaj, which was described as the highest bridge in the Middle East, reportedly killed eight people and wounded 95 others, causing it to collapse.^[507] Trump gloated on the attack, which experts assessed as a possible war crime.^[508] At the time of the attack, many Iranian families had been gathered in the parks below the bridge to celebrate Sizdah Be-dar.^[509]

Iran revealed major damage to the century-old medical center Pasteur Institute of Iran. US Defense Secretary Hegseth boasted of "death and destruction from the sky all day long".^[508] The IDF also announced that one of its strikes in the Kermanshah area of Iran killed Iranian ballistics missile chief Makram Atimi and several battalion commanders from Atimi's central Iranian ballistic missile unit.^{[510][511]} An Iranian ballistic missile strike damaged an Israeli drone factory in Petah Tikva.^{[512][513][514]}

On 3 April, Iranian forces shot down a US Air Force F-15E Strike Eagle fighter jet over the country, with the wreckage falling in the Kohgiluyeh and Boyer-Ahmad province of Iran,^[515] prompting a search and rescue mission by US helicopters.^[516] The pilot was rescued that same day, but the WSO remained missing and was rescued alive 48 hours later.^[517]

A US A-10 "Warthog" aircraft was downed and its single crew member ejected near the Strait of Hormuz and was rescued.^[518] Iran released a video showing shooting down the aircraft using surface-to-air missile.^[519]

On the same day, Tehran's Shahid Beheshti University was hit by airstrikes, making the total number of universities hit to more than 30, according to the Iranian Minister of Science.^[520]

Sixth week (4–7 April)

On 4 April, explosions were reported at an auxiliary building of the Bushehr Nuclear Power Plant as well as the Mahshahr Special Petrochemical Zone in Mahshahr, Iran.^[521] The airstrikes in Mahshahr killed at least five and injured 170 others.^[522] An Iranian missile strike hit in the vicinity of the IDF's HaKirya headquarters in Tel Aviv.^[523]

On 5 April, after heavy fighting, the second stranded crew member from the F-15E downed on 3 April was recovered by US forces in a rescue operation, which resulted in damage to helicopters, the shooting down of an A-10 Thunderbolt II,^[524] and the destruction of two C-130 Hercules, three IRGC members killed, and several American service members injured.^[517]

On 6 April, the IRGC announced that the head of the IRGC's intelligence organisation, Major General Majid Khademi, had been killed in a joint U.S.-Israeli airstrike. Their statement claimed that Khademi had "played a major role in Iran's intelligence and security apparatus over nearly five decades".^[525] Israel claimed that Yazdan Mir, a high-ranking commander of the IRGC Quds Force, had also been killed in the attacks.^[526]

On the same day, before Trump's deadline for targeting Iranian infrastructure,^[527] Israel carried out strikes on the South Pars Petrochemical facility in Asaluyeh, Iran.^[528] The Israeli Air Force claimed that "85% of Iran's petrochemical exports" had been taken offline by now.^[529]

At least 34 people, including six children, were killed in US-Israeli airstrikes across Iran, including against Sharif University of Technology and residential areas. Iranian vice president and reformist politician Mohammad Reza Aref, who is also an alumnus of the university, described the alleged use of a bunker-buster bomb as a "symbol of Trump's madness and ignorance".^[530]

7 April 2026 Truth Social post in which Trump threatened, "A whole civilization will die tonight, never to be brought back again."

On 7 April, The Rafi'-Nia synagogue in central Tehran was destroyed in an airstrike.^[531] Israel said that the building was destroyed due to collateral damage and that it was never meant to be the direct target of the airstrike.^[532] The same day, US forces began strikes on Kharg Island.^[533] In response, Iran said its restraint in targeting oil infrastructure in the region would no longer apply.^[534] Trump posted to Truth Social that "a whole civilization will die tonight, never to be brought back again",^[535] causing international concern that Trump would use nuclear weapons. The Secretary General of Amnesty International said that Trump's statement "may constitute a threat to commit genocide".^[536] Multiple right-wing commentators and many Democrats condemned the post, and some called for him to be removed through the 25th Amendment.^{[537][538]} The White House denied considering using nuclear weapons.^[539] The White House later said that "only the president knows" what he would do on Iran.^[540]

Ceasefire (8 April – present)

On 7 April at 6:32 p.m. Eastern Time in the US (8 April, 1:32 a.m. in Israel and 8 April, 2:02 a.m. in Iran), President Trump announced on Truth Social that the US and Iran had reached an agreement based on the 10-point proposal mediated by Pakistani Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and Field Marshal Asim Munir,^[541] writing on Truth Social that Iran had sent the US a 10-point proposal, which the US believes is a "workable basis on which to negotiate".^[542] The US, Israel, and Iran agreed to a two-week ceasefire, under which Iran would also re-open the Strait of Hormuz; while the announcement occurred on 7 April in Washington, the acceptance and official implementation took effect on 8 April local time in the Middle East.^[543]

After the ceasefire announcement, Iran's Lavan Island oil refinery and Sirri Island crude export facilities were struck by an "enemy attack". No party claimed responsibility.^[544] In response, Iran continued to conduct missile and drone strikes on Gulf Arab states such as Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Kuwait, Qatar, and Bahrain.^[545]

Israel and the US assert that the ceasefire does not include Lebanon,^{[546][547]} contradicting the Pakistani mediators and Iran.^[548] Hezbollah said that it halted attacks on Israel and on Israeli soldiers in Lebanon.^[549] Despite the ceasefire, Israel launched "Operation Eternal Darkness", which Israel said included wide-ranging operation targeting all of Hezbollah's command and control centers in southern Lebanon, Beirut and the Beqaa Valley.^[550] These were the largest attacks since the start of the war,^[551] killing at least 357 people and injuring more than 1,200 others.^{[552][553]} In Beirut alone, at least 92 people were killed and at least 742 others were injured.^[554] In response, Iran threatened to attack Israel "if the aggressions against dear Lebanon are not brought to an immediate end",^[555] Iranian media later said that Iran paused Hormuz traffic over Israeli attacks in Lebanon.^[556] Hezbollah claimed responsibility for launching rockets towards northern Israel as a response to "cease-fire violations".^[557]

Aftermath of 8 April 2026 Israeli attacks on Beirut, Lebanon

On 11 April, Trump said that American forces had started "clearing" the Strait of Hormuz.^[558] Iran claimed that an American ship on its way to the strait turned back after being warned.^[559] The Wall Street Journal reported that several US Navy destroyers entered the strait for the first time since the war began. A US official described it as an "operation that focused on freedom of navigation through international waters". The Iranian government reportedly threatened to attack the ships, accusing the US of a ceasefire violation.^{[560][561]} US Central Command said the ships are taking part in minesweeping.^[562] On the same day, the talks between the US and Iran—the highest-level discussions between the two countries since the 1979 Islamic Revolution—were held in Islamabad,

Pakistan, lasting 21 hours, after which JD Vance announced that no agreement had been reached, stating that Iran had refused "to accept our terms."^[563] Afterwards, Trump said that he no longer cared about negotiations with Iran.^[111]

Trump declared that the US Navy would begin its own blockade of "all Ships trying to enter, or leave, the Strait of Hormuz" from 13 April. He also said the US Navy would stop any ships that paid tolls to Iran.^[564] However, United States Central Command clarified that the blockade would only be enforced on ships travelling to or from Iranian ports.^[565] The IRGC Navy said that any military vessel approaching the strait would be considered a ceasefire violation and would meet a "severe response."^[566] Trump threatened to strike any fast-attack ships of the IRGC Navy, similar to how the US carried out strikes against alleged drug traffickers during Operation Southern Spear.^[567]

According to a US analyst, Iran had 13 days of oil storage capacity, forcing it to shut down its oil fields thereafter and potentially damaging them.^[568] The same analyst estimated the loss of import and export capacity to $435 million USD per day.^[568]

On 14 April, at least four Iranian-linked ships traveled through the Strait of Hormuz, despite the US blockade, according to public transponder data seen by BBC Verify.^{[569][570]} Those ships later stopped or turned around, after presumed interception by the US Navy, according to shipping data firms and the Sydney Morning Herald.^[571] Later that day, a US official said that eight oil tankers sailing to or from Iranian ports had been intercepted since the start of the blockade, adding that all tankers complied with orders.^[572] Tankers leaving Chabahar Port were contacted by a US destroyer, while Boeing P-8 Poseidon patrol aircraft were also used to intercept tankers.^[572] On 16 April, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Dan Caine, announced that 13 oil tankers had been intercepted by the US Navy in its blockade of Iran, with all ships complying with US directions and no boarding needed.^[573]

On 16 April, President Trump announced that Israel and Lebanon agreed to a ten-day truce.^[113]

As a result of the ceasefire in Lebanon, on 17 April, Iran announced that passage of commercial vessels through the Strait of Hormuz would be allowed during the truce.^[114] Despite this, President Trump said that the US blockade of ships traveling to or from Iranian ports would continue.^[574] As a result of the US decision to continue its blockade, Iran announced that it would re-impose restrictions on the Strait of Hormuz.^{[575][576][115]} Meanwhile, the US stated that its blockade had intercepted 23 ships traveling to or from Iranian ports.^[577]

On 19 April, Trump sent two negotiators to Pakistan, saying that planned talks were Iran's "last chance" to reach a deal.^[578] He threatened that Iran would be "blown up" if the negotiations fail, saying the US will target power plants and bridges.^[579]

The US Navy seized an Iranian cargo ship on 19 April, saying it was attempting to evade their blockade. Trump said that a US guided-missile destroyer fired at the ship, damaging its engine room.^{[580][581]} Iran called this seizure a breach of the ceasefire, which was due to end on 22 April.^[116] Iran retaliated by launching drones at US ships, although no damage was reported.^[582]

On 21 April, the Pentagon said that US soldiers boarded a sanctioned tanker in the Indo-Pacific region as part of an effort to disrupt ships providing support to Iran.^[583] Trump said the US military intercepted a "gift from China" to Iran. The Chinese foreign ministry stated that it "opposes any malicious association".^[584] The same day, Trump claimed the three Iranian nuclear sites are being watched by the US Space Force.^[585] JD Vance was expected to visit Islamabad for talks on 22 April, but the talks were paused by the US due to it not receiving a response from Iran.^[586]

A day before the ceasefire was due to end on 22 April, Trump said he will not extend the truce unless Iran agrees to a deal and said the US military was "raring to go", warning that bombing would resume soon.^[587] Hours before the ceasefire was due to end, Trump extended the truce, saying he did so at Pakistan's request, to allow time for an Iranian proposal to be submitted.^[118]

Hours after the ceasefire was extended, the Iranian Revolutionary Guard announced that it had seized two container ships and fired on one of them, causing "serious damage to the bridge". This was in response to the US seizing an Iranian ship three days earlier.^[588] On 22–23 April, three Iranian oil tankers were reportedly intercepted by the US in the eastern Indian Ocean^[589] and an Iranian-linked oil tanker was seized by the US.^[590] Later, Iranian state media reported that air defenses in Tehran engaged "small drones, micro-UAVs".^[591] On 23 April, Trump ordered the US Navy to destroy any Iranian boats laying mines in the Hormuz strait.^[117]

Despite the Iranian seizure of two cargo ships,^[119] Trump claimed on 23 April that the US fully controlled the Strait of Hormuz and said that he is the one keeping the strait closed, because opening it would allow Iran to "make $500 million a day".^[592] The Guardian described the situation as a "dual blockade", saying that while the US Navy was able to blockade Iranian ports, it had not been able to stop the Iranian blockade or open the strait to US allies.^[119] The same day, Trump announced that Israel and Lebanon agreed to a three-week extension of the ceasefire.^[593]

On 24 April, Iran said that it seized a ship suspected of collaborating with American military after the ship committed violations and ignored warnings.^[594] On 25 April, Trump said that he canceled the US negotiators' trip to Pakistan for negotiations with Iran.^[595]

On 1 May, Trump issued letters to congressional leaders according to the 1973 War Powers Resolution limiting conflicts to 60 days, that hostilities had ended so far, but conflict remains.^[253] On 3 May, Trump said that the US will help free up ships in the Strait of Hormuz beginning the next morning.^[120]

On 4 May, the Iranian military warned the US to keep out of Hormuz.^[121] The UAE and Oman said that they had intercepted Iranian ballistic missiles, cruise missiles, and drones on the same day.^{[596][597]} Iranian state media claimed that the Iranian navy fired two missiles and hit an American naval frigate in the Strait of Hormuz. CENTCOM denied that the missiles struck the ship.^{[598][599]} CENTCOM later reported that it destroyed six small boats launched by the Iranian military towards ships in the Strait of Hormuz.^[598] The UAE said that an Iranian drone strike on an oil processing plant in Fujairah caused a fire, injuring three Indian citizens.^[600] On 5 May, the UAE said that it dealt with missile and drone attacks from Iran for the second consecutive day. Iran denied conducting attacks against the UAE in recent days.^[601] On 6 May, President Trump announced a temporary halt in the US military's "Project Freedom" operation to reopen the Strait of Hormuz, citing "great progress" toward a potential agreement with Iran. Trump stated that the operation will be paused for "a short period" to determine whether a "complete and final agreement" with Iran could be achieved.^[122] On the same day, Trump warned that if Iran does not agree to an agreement to end the war, the United States will resume bombing at a "much higher level and intensity".^[123] The US military said on the same day that it crippled an Iranian-flagged oil tanker in the Gulf of Oman after it allegedly attempted to breach the American blockade and cruise toward an Iranian port.^[124]

Strikes and casualties

Iran

The US and Israel eliminated many Iranian commanders and leaders on the war's first day due to a successful deception. IT caused Iran to believe that strikes were not imminent. Thus, groups of senior Iranian officials continued gathering in person. These gatherings were targeted in initial strikes. One part of the deception was

information about a US F-22 deployment leaked to hide that preparations were more advanced at other bases.^{[602][603]} Calls between Trump and Netanyahu before the war were not publicised to diminish the possibility of an Iranian first strike.^[603]

IDF Spokesperson Brigadier General Effie Defrin stated that months of joint US and Israeli "strategic and operational deception" of satellite imagery led up to the war. This encompassed planes and other facilities. The night of the initial strike he and IDF Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Eyal Zamir took their official cars home from IDF Headquarters.^[602] They came back without them so that satellite imagery would show that their base did not appear full nor warplanes appear armed and ready.^{[604][605]} Three separate gatherings of Iranian regime officials were hit within half a minute of each other in the opening strike.^[603]

Assassination of Ali Khamenei

On 28 February 2026, Ali Khamenei, the supreme leader of Iran, was assassinated in an Israeli air attack.^{[606][603]} On 1 March, Iranian state media announced Khamenei's death.^[607] The IRGC-controlled Fars News Agency, announced that Khamenei's daughter, son-in-law, grandchild, and daughter-in-law Zahra Haddad-Adel had also been killed.^{[608][609][610]} The Iranian government declared 40 days of mourning.^[611]

Military and officials

The initial dead included Iranian defense minister Aziz Nasirzadeh, and four top Ministry of Intelligence officials.^[612]

Additional senior officials included Salah Asadi, head of intelligence for Iran's emergency command, Mohammad Shirazi, head of Khamenei's military office, head of the Organization of Defensive Innovation and Research (SPND) Hossein Jabal Amelian, former SPND head Reza Mozaffari Nia,^[205] and chief of staff Abdolrahim Mousavi, among 40 official as reported by intelligence and military sources.^[613]

On 13 March, IDF estimated that between 3,000 and 4,000 Iranian soldiers and commanders had been killed.^[614]

On 17 March, Israel assassinated Ali Larijani, secretary of Iran's Supreme National Security Council.^[421] IRGC commander Mohammad Pakpour and Defence Council secretary Ali Shamkhani were reported dead in late March.^[615]

On 18 March, the Hengaw Organization for Human Rights estimated that 5,300+ members of the Iranian military had been killed.^[616]

On 31 March, Iran International reported that at least 4,700 security forces had been killed.^[617]

On 6 April, the head of IRGC intelligence, Major General Majid Khademi, was assassinated in a joint U.S.-Israeli airstrike.^[525]

As of 7 April, Human Rights Activists in Iran (HRANA), a US-based non-governmental organization, reported 3,636 documented war deaths, including 1,701 civilians, 1,221 military personnel, and 714 unclassified. According to HRANA, "[i]t is believed that military casualties are significantly higher than the figures reported in [its] reports" as confirmations depend largely on government data. Its count largely reflects reports of military personnel present in urban areas.^[618]

Civilians

On the first day of the war, the Shajareh Tayyebah girl's elementary school in Minab was hit by an American attack, according to Iran.^[619] The school was located near^[ah] the Sayyid al-Shuhada military complex,^[623] of which it had once been a part.^{[622][624]} While the number killed was not independently confirmed,^[625] Iranian state media reported that more than 175 people, mostly children, were killed while 95 were wounded.^[626] Video showed a Tomahawk missile hitting a building adjacent to the school;^[627] preliminary findings from an American military investigation indicated that the strike resulted from outdated targeting data.^[628]

At least 20 civilians, mostly families who gathered after breaking their fast at Ramadan,^[629] were killed in Tehran's Niloofar Square on 1 or 2 March, according to Iranian-state media.^[630] On 3 March, the Iranian Red Crescent Society said that over 600 civilians had been killed^[631] while HRANA reported 1,097 civilian deaths.^[632] On 7 March, the Red Crescent reported that over 6,668 civilian "units" had been targeted by US-Israeli strikes, including 5,535 residential units, 1,041 commercial units, 14 medical centers, 65 schools, and 13 centers affiliated with the Red Crescent.^[633] The Middle East Eye, an anti-Israel news outlet, reported that the US used double tap airstrikes,^{[634][635]} although the US denies this. As of 23 March, HRANA estimated that at least 15% of the casualties were under age 18.^[636]

An Israeli airstrike on 9 March in Resalat neighbourhood of Tehran destroyed a Basij-affiliated building as well as three residential buildings, killing 40 to 50. According to a BBC analysis, Israel used Mark 82 bombs in the attack.^[629]

As of 27 March, Iran has reported damage to at least 120 historical sites.^[637]

The deadly attack on residential buildings and a sports hall in the town of Lamerd killed 21 including 4 children and injured 100.^[638]

Institutions

The initial attack targeted Leadership House. On 2 March, video footage released by Iran International showed the destroyed IRGC Malek-Ashtar building in Tehran following a joint US-Israel missile strike.^[639] On 3 March, the complex of Islamic Republic of Iran Broadcasting (IRIB), the state broadcaster's headquarters, was hit in an Israeli air operation.^{[640][641]}

Iranian state-linked media indicated that Iran's parliament building was targeted.^[642] On 3 March, Israeli forces bombed the Assembly of Experts office building in Qom.^{[643][644]}

Infrastructure

By 5 March, the World Health Organization had identified 13 Iranian health sites hit, as well as one in Lebanon.^[645] The Iranian Foreign Minister said that the US had struck a desalination plant on Qeshm Island, disrupting water supply to 30 villages, but both the US and Israel denied an attack.^{[646][348]} The Russian consulate in Isfahan was damaged.^[647]

United States

On 1 March, six US soldiers were killed amid more than 30 injured in an Iranian drone attack near Camp Arifjan in Port Shuaiba, Kuwait. Those killed were soldiers of the United States Army Reserve assigned to the 103rd Expeditionary Sustainment Command, headquartered in Des Moines, Iowa.^[648] On 4 March, US Marine Corps Lance Corporal Kevin Melendez died in Saudi Arabia in a non-hostile incident.^[649] On 8 March, CENTCOM reported that a National Guard soldier died during a medical emergency.^[650] Sgt. Benjamin N. Pennington, a soldier of the 1st Space Brigade wounded in an attack against Prince Sultan Air Base in Saudi Arabia on 1 March, died from his injuries on 9 March.^[651]

Six American airmen were killed on 12 March when their KC-135 aerial refueling aircraft crashed in western Iraq. CENTCOM said that the crash was not the result of hostile action, but had resulted during an incident involving another US aircraft. By 13 March, the US military publicly announced that about 140 American servicemen had been injured.^[652] A 27 March attack on Prince Sultan Air Base damaged "multiple" refueling aircraft and destroyed a Boeing E-3 Sentry, as well as wounding at least 15 US soldiers.^{[653][654][473]}

The USS Gerald R. Ford, the largest aircraft carrier in theatre, was damaged by a fire that broke out 12 March. The US Navy said the fire had injured multiple sailors,^[ai] started in a laundry area and was not combat-related.^[659] The carrier had been dealing with other mechanical issues, including a malfunctioning sewage treatment system, since before it arrived in the Middle East.^[660] According to multiple reports on 17–18 March, Gerald R. Ford paused launching airstrikes and sailed toward the Crete Naval Base for repairs.^[656]

Many US military bases near Iran were rendered "all but uninhabitable" due to Iranian strikes. Within the war's first two weeks, Iran's attacks caused $800 million in damage to bases. Affected bases include Al-Sader and Al-Ruwais in the UAE, the naval base in Bahrain, Ali Al-Salem in Kuwait, Al-Udeid in Qatar, and Prince Sultan in Saudi Arabia. According to unnamed officials, the damage degraded the US's military ability in the war. Many US servicemembers relocated to "hotels and office spaces", which raised concerns of the US using civilians as human shields. An attack on a hotel in Bahrain injured two Pentagon employees.^[661]

Israel

The first attack struck a residential building, leaving one Israeli injured.^[662] Magen David Adom reported that Iran's initial attacks had left 89 injured, with three directly wounded and the rest indirectly, most of them civilians.^[663] On 28 February, a direct hit in Tel Aviv killed a woman and injured 22 others, one seriously.^[664] On 1 March, a strike hit a synagogue and residential buildings in Beit Shemesh, killing nine and injuring 49 others.^[665] On 9 March, two workers were killed in Yehud, outside of Tel Aviv, after they were struck by submunitions from an Iranian missile equipped with a cluster bomb warhead.^{[666][667]}

On 17 March, a cluster munition from an Iranian missile hit an apartment building in Ramat Gan and killed two residents. A statement from the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps called the barrage "revenge for the blood of martyr Dr. Ali Larijani and his companions", who had been killed the day before.^[668] According to CNN, the use of cluster munitions violates international law. N.R. Jenzen-Jones of Armament Research Services stated that this type of warhead is being used "primarily to sow terror amongst a civilian population".^[669]

The executive director of the Arms Control Association called the Iranian use of cluster munitions at residential sections of Israel during the war as deliberate, saying that "Iran appears to be launching them into relatively populated areas, probably with the goal of producing potential civilian harm."^[670] Neither Iran nor Israel is party to the Convention on Cluster Munitions,^[671] and both Israel and Iran are among 17 countries that either produce cluster munitions, or reserve the right to do so.^[672]

On 4 April, an Iranian missile strike hit in the vicinity of the IDF's Kirya headquarters in Tel Aviv.^[523]

Lebanon

More than 2,000 people were killed and over 4,000 were wounded by Israeli strikes in Lebanon,^[72] and Lebanon states more than one million people,^[673] 1/6th of the population,^[674] were displaced.^[675] During the war, six United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon peacekeepers were killed^[u] and 11 were injured.^{[v][49]}

Iraq

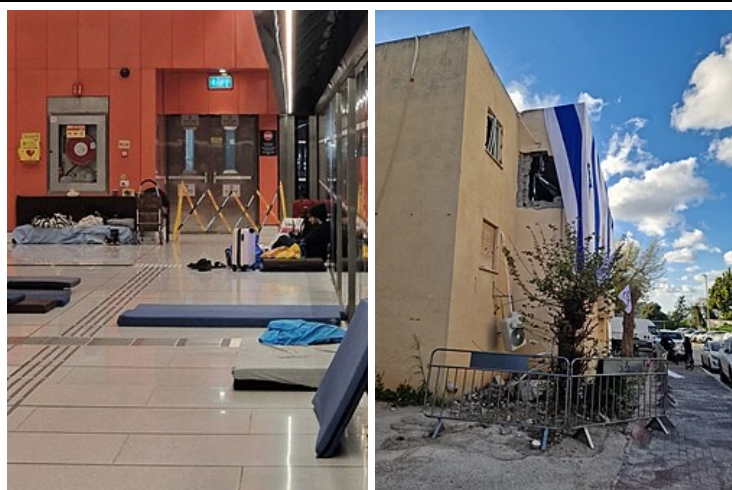

In Iraq, two members of the Iran-backed Popular Mobilization Forces (PMF) were killed and three injured in a US-Israeli attack on 28 February.^[676] A later report estimated three dead.^[677] On 1 and 2 March, the United States and Israel conducted several attacks on Iranian-backed Iraqi militias to degrade their military capabilities.^[678]

Iranian attacks on US-allied Arab countries

In addition to Israel, Iran launched strikes against multiple US-allied Arab countries. Iranian strikes against Bahrain killed three.^[680] Strikes against Kuwait killed four soldiers and four civilians.^[681] Strikes against Oman killed three.^[682] Strikes against Saudi Arabia killed two.^[683] Strikes against the United Arab Emirates killed two soldiers and six civilians.^[684]

Iran also struck Qatar,^[685] Azerbaijan,^[324] and the Akrotiri and Dhekelia British Overseas Territory on Cyprus.^[686]

The Iranian attacks affected military infrastructure from NATO countries in the region, "including an Italian installation in Iraq and Kuwait, and a French naval facility in the United Arab Emirates".^[687]

Direct impacts

Iran

Leadership

The death of Ali Khamenei triggered an election for a new supreme leader. Under the terms of Iran's constitution, an Interim Leadership Council was established on 1 March to exercise the functions of Iran's head of state until a new supreme leader is elected.^[236]

Mojtaba Khamenei was elected on 8 March 2026 to replace his father as supreme leader,^[722] and the IRGC, as well as Iran's top leaders, including Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf, Ali Larijani, and Masoud Pezeshkian,^[723] pledged their allegiance to him.^[724]

In late March, the NYT described Iran's leadership as paralyzed with severely disrupted decision-making process. It also reported that the damage to communications infrastructure caused paranoia and internal power struggles.^[725]

Civilian life

According to UN Human Rights Chief Volker Türk, the "reckless" war is disproportionately impacting civilians in the Middle East and beyond.^[726]

138,000 civilian sites in Iran were damaged during the conflict, with estimated time of reconstruction being 2 to 5 years.^[727]

As the US and Israel executed joint strikes targeting Iranian military and institutional targets, Iran's capital reportedly became a ghost town, as civilians feared going outside or to their daily jobs.^[728] Reports have emerged that prisoners in Evin Prison have been receiving limited bread and water since the onset of the war.^[729] After the strikes, schools were ordered closed while banks and government offices remained in operation at reduced capacity. Local media reported that subway and bus services would remain operational.^[730]

Residents in Tehran on the third day of US-Israeli airstrikes, 3 March 2026

Amid the renewed "near total" internet blackout in Iran, NetBlocks reported that internet connectivity in Iran dropped to 4% of ordinary levels.^{[625][731][732]} While the internet blackout has exceeded 240 hours, making it the second longest ever, the government started handing out "white sim cards", which bypass filters, to government supporters, in order to allow them to promote its messaging.^{[733][213]} As news of Khamenei's death broke, security forces were deployed to prevent an uprising, with footage showing them opening fire on celebrants in the streets^{[734][735][736]} and shooting at people chanting behind the windows of their homes.^[737]

During the first two weeks of March 2026, over 70,000 Afghan refugees returned to Afghanistan, frequently under forced circumstances, exacerbating the country's severe humanitarian crisis.^[738] Arafat Jamal, the UNHCR Representative in Afghanistan, noted that they faced limited options amid the military confrontations between Afghanistan and Pakistan.^[739]

According to The Guardian, the war has overshadowed the executions of political prisoners in Iran, including those involved in the mass protests of January 2026, allowing Iran to continue carrying out death sentences and other severe punishments with little international scrutiny.^[740]

Military

On 26 March, it was reported that children as young as 12 years of age may join Iran's war support, leading to concerns of the use of child soldiers.^{[741][742][743]} Days later, rights groups stated an 11-year-old was killed while on duty at a Tehran checkpoint.^[744]

On 29 March, footage showed Iraq's Popular Mobilization Forces deployed in Iran.^{[745][746][490]}

Kurdish–Iranian crisis

According to The Wall Street Journal, Trump had been open to supporting armed militias, particularly Kurds in Iran that have been in armed conflict with Tehran for decades^[298] and have historically been a regional ally of the United States.^[747] However, Trump later said he had ruled out sending the Kurds to Iran.^[748]

Cultural heritage sites

Multiple historic and cultural sites, including UNESCO World Heritage Sites, were damaged during the war. The most affected was Chehel Sotoun and its rich ayeneh-kari.^[749] On 2 March, a strike on Arg Square damaged nearby Golestan Palace, prompting UNESCO to issue a statement of concern.^{[750][751]} On 5 March, the Azadi Sport Complex was bombed.^[752] An 8 March strike on Falak-ol-Aflak, which was marked with a blue shield emblem, damaged several sections of the site.^[753] Strikes on Isfahan on 9 March damaged Naqsh-e Jahan Square, Chehel Sotoun, Ali Qapu, the Shah Mosque, Jameh Mosque, and Teymouri Hall.^{[754][753]} On 11 March, UNESCO urged protection for Iran's heritage sites and World Heritage Sites that have been damaged or are under high risk due to the war, alongside other historic sites in Israel, Lebanon, and across the Middle East.^[755]

Israel

Israel declared a nationwide state of emergency, saying that the strikes on Iran were the largest that it had ever launched.^{[216][756]} Israeli schools and workspaces were closed and public gatherings were canceled.^[757]

In the 40 days from the start of the war through the 8 April ceasefire, there were a total of 650 missile attacks from Iran to Israel, the majority of which carried cluster munitions. About 16 of the missiles that made it past Israeli missile defenses carried conventional warheads, while 50 had cluster munitions. The attacks killed a total of 24 people, all of them civilians, and resulted in more than 7,000 injuries. Of the 24 civilians killed, 14 were struck by warheads with conventional explosive warheads and 10 were victims of cluster submunitions; two of the deaths were inside a sheltered space, with the other fatalities being people in unprotected areas.^[758]

Palestine

The Israeli Coordinator of Government Activities in the Territories closed multiple aid crossings in the Gaza Strip, specifically interrupting free circulation on the Egypt–Gaza border.^[759] Israeli forces suspended United Nations humanitarian movements and postponed planned rotations of international humanitarian staff, including medical evacuations and the return of people into Gaza, which the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs condemned.^[760]

Israeli settler violence against Palestinians in occupied West Bank has increased; settlers have taken advantage of curbs on movement imposed during the renewed Israeli state of emergency. The renewed blocking of West Bank roads in the context of the 2026 Lebanon war has delayed medics from assisting injured Palestinians.^[761] The EU stated on 10 March that the Israeli actions were unacceptable and urged the Israeli authorities to make immediate efforts to prevent the violence against Palestinian civilians under international law, warning that "impunity for such acts risks provoking further violence".^[762]

Lebanon

As of 1 May, at least 2,618 people have been killed and 8,094 wounded by Israeli strikes in Lebanon during the 2026 Lebanon war.^[763] Internal Hezbollah sources said that over 1,000 Hezbollah fighters had been killed in the war^[764] while the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) said that it had killed 1,700 fighters.^[765]

According to Lebanon, over 1.2 million Lebanese nationals,^[766] corresponding to more than one-sixth of the country's population,^[767] were displaced.^{[768][769]} Over 40,000 homes in southern Lebanon have been destroyed.^[770] Israel's evacuation orders in Lebanon covered an area of over 1,470 square kilometres (570 sq mi), encompassing 14% of the country's territory. The displacement in Lebanon has been called one of the most severe and fastest-growing refugee crises worldwide.^[766] The war exacerbated the economic and humanitarian problems that have been ongoing in Lebanon since the 2019 financial crisis and 2020 Beirut explosion.^[771]

Gulf Arab states

The Arab states of the Persian Gulf started a campaign of prosecution against civilians and foreign citizens that shared or reposted rumours from unverified sources about the Iranian attacks, with the stated main goal to curb misinformation that could harm public order.^[772] Bahrain's Cyber Crime Directorate also started a campaign of arresting civilians in the country, which has a large Shiite minority, who allegedly expressed "their support for the Iranian shelling targeting the Kingdom of Bahrain", describing such activities as treason and as promotion of hostile acts against the state.^[773] Trump said "Even if we knew Gulf countries would be hit, big deal we did what we have to do".^[774]

Economic impacts

The war had global economic consequences: oil and gas prices surged, aviation and tourism were disrupted, and financial markets shuddered.^{[775][776]} International Energy Agency (IEA) head Fatih Birol described the situation as the "greatest global energy security challenge in history".^[777]

Energy

Oil and natural gas prices rose in direct response to Iranian threats to attack tankers and other ships and to Iranian strikes on oil facilities in Gulf producing countries.^[779] 20% of global oil and gas production normally transit the Strait of Hormuz.^[780] As the war continued, oil and gas prices ebbed and flowed as markets attempted to assess the likelihood of an end to the conflict. Prices ranged from below $70 before the war^[781] to as high as $139 on 7 March.^[782] Gas prices also rose.^[259]

Toward the end of March significant shortages of domestic petroleum products emerged in southeast Asia as reserves ran out.^[783]

Stock markets initially fell, with the Dow Jones Industrial Average falling over 400 points (one percent) on 2 March alone,^[784] although by mid-April had recovered and reached record highs.^[785]

The UN World Food Programme and various economic analysts warned that the war is driving significant, long-term increases in global food prices.^{[786][787]}

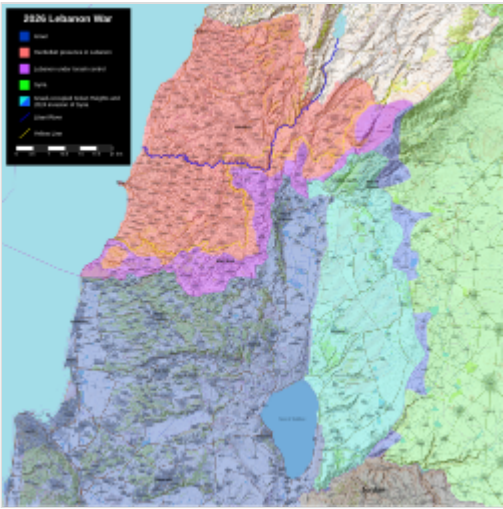

Commodities

Disruption in the supply of essential fertilizers due to the closure of the Strait threatened food production in many countries.^[788] The Fertilizer Institute stated that nearly 50% of global urea and sulfur exports annually transited through the Strait of Hormuz, made worse by the natural gas shortage, which is a key feedstock for nitrogen fertilizers.^[780]

Air travel

Iran's airspace emptied of civilian aircraft during the conflict,^[789] as Bahrain, Iraq, Israel, Kuwait, Qatar, Syria and the UAE closed their respective airspaces.^{[790][791][792]} Some carriers suspended service to the Middle East.^[793]

Strait of Hormuz

Shipping traffic through the Strait of Hormuz, a major maritime choke point for world energy trade, has been largely blocked by Iran since 28 February 2026, when the United States and Israel launched an air war against Iran and assassinated its supreme leader, Ali Khamenei. In retaliation, Iran launched missile and drone attacks on Israel, US military bases, and US-allied Gulf states. The Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) issued warnings forbidding passage through the strait, boarded and attacked merchant ships, and laid sea mines in the strait. Since 13 April, the US has simultaneously blockaded Iranian ports. Until the US–Israeli war against Iran, the Strait of Hormuz was open and about 25% of the world's seaborne oil trade and 20% of the world's liquefied natural gas passed through it.

The Iranian warnings and subsequent attacks on vessels prompted shipping firms to suspend operations in the strait.^{[795][796]} This caused a sharp decline in maritime transit, with tanker traffic dropping first by about 70% and over 150 ships anchoring outside the strait to avoid risks.^{[797][798]} Soon afterwards traffic dropped to about zero. On 27 March, the IRGC announced that the strait was closed to any vessel going "to and from" the ports of the US, Israel, and their allies.^[799] The International Maritime Organization reported on 21 April that about 20,000 mariners and 2,000 ships were stranded in the Persian Gulf due to the closure.^[800] According to Majid Rafizadeh, Iran is violating the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, which it has not ratified.^{[801][802]}

Amid fears of prolonged supply shortages, oil prices rose faster than during any other conflict in recent history;^[803] Brent crude oil prices surpassed US$100 per barrel on 8 March for the first time in four years, rising to US$126 per barrel at their peak.^{[798][804][805][806]} The largest-ever monthly increase in oil prices occurred in March 2026.^[807] The closure of the strait has been the largest disruption to world energy supply since the 1970s energy crisis^[808] as well as the largest in the history of the world oil market.^[809] Other commodity markets to suffer supply disruption and price increases due to the crisis include aluminum,^[810] fertilizer,^[811] and helium.^{[812][813]}

On 9 March, US president Donald Trump falsely claimed that Iran's military had been destroyed and that the strait was open, saying that the US might seize control of it from Iran.^[814] On 15 March, he called on NATO members and China to help to reopen the strait.^[815] In late March and early April, Trump repeatedly threatened to destroy Iran's infrastructure if it did not reopen the strait.^[816] On 8 April, a temporary ceasefire between Iran and the US was agreed and was to involve the reopening of the strait. However, Iran began controlling traffic through the strait and charging tolls of over $1 million per ship.^[817] Following the failure of the Islamabad Talks, the US Navy itself began to blockade Iranian ports from 13 April.^{[818][819]} The situation was described by The Guardian as a "dual blockade", with the US Navy blockading Iran and Iran blockading the Gulf.^[820]

On 17 April, due to an Israel–Lebanon ceasefire agreement, Iran announced that the Strait of Hormuz would be open to commercial shipping during the truce. Despite this, the US continued its blockade of Iran,^[821] and Iran reimposed restrictions as a result.^{[822][823][824]} On 4 May, Trump launched Operation Project Freedom, a US Navy mission to escort merchant ships out of the Gulf. The Iranian military warned that this would be a ceasefire violation.^[825] On 6 May, President Trump announced a temporary pause in the US military's "Project Freedom" operation to reopen the Strait of Hormuz, indicating "great progress" toward a possible agreement with Iran. The operation will be delayed briefly to assess the potential for a "complete and final agreement" with Iran.^[826]

Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb

Houthi-controlled Yemen threatened shipping in the Gulf of Aden and Red Sea. Its threats had been suspended since 10 October 2025.^[827] March threats by Houthi leader Abdul-Malik al-Houthi had not stopped Red Sea traffic as of mid-April, although traffic remained under historic levels after crashing in 2024 as a result of Houthi attacks.^[828] On 15 March, the Associated Press reported that the weapons stockpile of the Houthis was running low from repeated attacks on Israel, while Iran had not been able to resupply them, because of the war.^{[829][830]}

Internet infrastructure

Three Amazon Web Services data centers in the United Arab Emirates were struck and damaged as a result of drone strikes, leading to outages of web infrastructure within the Middle East,^[831] causing "sparks and fire" as well as "major structural damage" for 2 of the centers, with internal water levels reaching up to 4 cm, worsened by the failure of cooling and air systems. Fundamental web infrastructure including S3 storage, EC2 compute and DynamoDB databases suffered complete outages in early March.^[832] Iran shut down Internet access for its people throughout the war.^[833] Users who took the potentially fatal risk of smuggling Starlink terminals into the country retained some access.

Military costs

US military costs were estimated at $25-35 billion as of early April.^[834] Israeli costs were estimated at $11 billion.^[835] Costs to the Iranian economy were estimated at $40-50 billion, around 10% of GDP.^[836] The monetary costs of Iranian attacks were much lower than the costs of neutralizing them: PATRIOT and THAAD interceptors are $4 million and $12 million, respectively, as opposed to $50,000 for a Shahed drone.^[372]

Reactions

Iran

Iran's Foreign Ministry vowed a response as Iranian forces struck US bases across the Persian Gulf.^{[837][838]} The Supreme National Security Council said Iran was targeted by a "brutal air operation" carried out by the US and Israel, saying: "This occurred once again during negotiations, and the enemy imagines that the resilient Iranian nation will surrender to their petty demands through these cowardly actions."^[839] Iranian foreign minister Abbas Araghchi called the attacks "wholly unprovoked, illegal, and illegitimate" and said attacks by Iran will continue until as long as they are defending.^{[840][841]} Vice President Aref stated that the path to social justice will not be resisted or stopped by any missile attack.^[842] Iranian president Masoud Pezeshkian said that if the US and Israel are not held accountable for their actions "global order will be shaken".^[843] Pezeshkian said that US should take their unconditional surrender demand "to their grave".^[844] He initially apologized for the attacks on neighboring nations, blaming "miscommunication in the ranks".^{[844][845]} Later he said that Iran had to target countries whose territory was used to attack Iran.^[846] Iranian officials rejected Trump's attempt to insert himself into the government's succession plans.^[847]

On 19 March, Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesperson Esmail Baghaei accused the US and Israel of "terrorist acts" over the deaths of top figures, calling the attacks an "illegal war". He said that Australia's military assets were legitimate targets, over the deployment of a surveillance aircraft along with personnel to the UAE.^{[848][849]} On 20 March, Abolfazl Shekarchi warned US and Israeli personnel that Iran was tracking the movements of "officials, commanders, and pilots" beyond active conflict zones and warned that public and recreational locations would no longer be safe for them.^[850] Iran denied targeting Azerbaijan, Turkey and Oman, blaming "Israeli false flag" attacks.^{[851][852]}

Vice president Mohammad Reza Aref described the alleged use of a bunker-buster bomb in an attack on the university as a "symbol of Trump's madness and ignorance".^[853] Deputy foreign minister Kazem Gharibabadi condemned what he called the repeated targeting of historical and cultural sites in Iran as "an assault on part of Iran's civilizational identity".^[854] Araghchi labeled the strike on a Tehran fuel depot as "ecocide".^[855] The Iranian government declared it had lifted import/export rules and restrictions,^[856] and announced that fuel and medicine were readily available.^[857] The national post temporarily paused parcel delivery.^[858] All sporting events were canceled. Iranian hajj pilgrims returned by land.^[859]

Media coverage

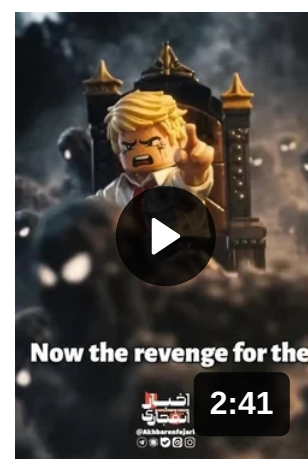

Background

Before hostilities erupted, media attention on US-Iran tensions increased in early 2026, following failed nuclear talks and domestic unrest in Iran. Iranian state media, such as the IRNA, portrayed these developments as provocations.^[860]

Disinformation and propaganda

Iranian state-controlled outlets have been described as employing propaganda techniques, including the use of AI-generated videos (such as those produced by Explosive Media) and inflated casualty figures.^[861] Trump has accused Iran of using artificial intelligence as a "disinformation weapon."^[862] Iranian media broadcast manipulated images of alleged victories, prompting fact-checking from organizations like NewsGuard.^[863] The Iranian government responded to the Trump administration's use of video game clips, cartoon characters, and blockbuster movie scenes for Iran messaging with an AI-generated propaganda video mimicking Lego animation, produced by the Revayat-e-Fath Institute and redistributed on various government-run outlets, including redistribution by the Iranian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The video declares itself in remembrance of the Minab school attack and showcases Iran attacking various of its neighbours and American-Israeli outposts.^{[864][865]}

Rumors that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had been killed in Iranian attacks were circulating widely on social media and were amplified by Iranian state-controlled outlets.^{[866][867]} Users claimed that footage of Netanyahu speaking at a press conference on 13 March 2026 was AI-generated, citing alleged anomalies such as a "sixth finger."^[868]

Lego-style propaganda animation produced by Iranian media company Explosive Media using text-to-video modeling.

Impact

Coverage of the war strained journalistic resources, with reports of targeted attacks on media infrastructure.^[869]

Israel

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the goal of the strikes was to "remove the existential threat posed by the terrorist regime in Iran", stating that "our joint action will create the conditions for the brave Iranian people to take their destiny into their own hands."^[870] Foreign minister Gideon Sa'ar said that military action against Iran was urgently needed "despite the significant risks involved", adding that "delay would have allowed the Iranian regime to reach a level of immunity for its nuclear programme, as well as to engage in the mass production of long-range ballistic missiles".^[871] Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was the first to report and celebrate the assassination, stating "for 47 years, the Ayatollah regime has chanted 'Death to Israel' and 'Death to America.' It has spilled our blood, murdered many Americans, and slaughtered its own people."^[872] Defense Minister Israel Katz celebrated the killing, stating "he who acted to destroy Israel – has been destroyed ... Justice has been served, and the axis of evil has suffered a mortal blow."^[873] On 29 March, Yuli Edelstein said that the strikes had set Iran back by years, but they had not yet succeeded in removing the Iranian threat.^[874] Opposition leaders also supported the strikes.^[875]

Media coverage

Background

Before hostilities erupted, media attention on US-Iran tensions increased in early 2026, following failed nuclear talks and reports of Iranian domestic unrest. Outlets such as CNN and The New York Times detailed US military buildups in the region, speculating about possible attacks.^[877] Israeli broadcasters focused on the threats posed by Iranian proxies such as Hezbollah.^[860]

Disinformation and propaganda

Rumors that Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had been killed in Iranian attacks were circulating widely on social media and were amplified by Iranian state-controlled outlets.^{[866][867]} Netanyahu responded by posting several videos, including one filmed in a Jerusalem cafe in which he sarcastically declared that he was "dying for coffee" while holding up a cappuccino and holding up his hands to show that he had five fingers.^[878] The cafe video itself quickly became the subject of fresh rumors, with some social media users and commentators claiming that it too was AI-generated or a deepfake. The cafe later released images as evidence that Netanyahu had visited.^{[879][880]}

United States

President Donald Trump said the US attack on Iran was "to prevent this very wicked, radical dictatorship from threatening America"^[881] and to eliminate "imminent threats" from Iran, adding: "For 47 years, the Iranian regime has chanted 'Death to America' and waged an unending campaign of bloodshed and mass murder, targeting the United States, our troops and the innocent people in many, many countries".^[882] He suggested that regime change was an aim, and called for Iranians to overthrow their government.^[883] Trump also said that talks with Iran will be easier following the assassination of Ali Khamenei.^[884] When Iran responded by closing the Strait of Hormuz and launching strikes against Arab Gulf allies, Trump said nobody had warned him and "Nobody expected that. We were shocked". It was later revealed that the president had been told of this likely Iranian retaliation.^[885]

Trump wrote on 6 March: "There will be no deal with Iran except UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER!"^[886] On 9 March, Trump said that "the war is very complete, pretty much", and falsely claimed the Iranian military had been destroyed and the Strait of Hormuz had re-opened.^[887] Five days later, he called for US allies and China to send warships to help re-open the strait.^[888] Trump went on to claim that the US and Israel had "won" the war several times, while continuing to say that the US had not yet completed its objectives.^{[889][890]} He denied that he had ever called for regime change.^[891] The president also repeatedly claimed that Iran's military had been destroyed, despite it continuing to launch attacks.^{[892][893]}

US president Trump overseeing the start of "Operation Epic Fury"

In late March and early April, Trump repeatedly gave ultimatums to Iran, threatening to destroy Iran's civilian infrastructure and bombing it "back to the Stone Ages" if it did not make a deal with the US and re-open the Hormuz strait.^[894] On 7 April, the president threatened that "a whole civilization will die tonight".^{[895][896]} Following the failed Islamabad Talks, Trump said that he "doesn't care" about negotiations,^[897] and announced that the US itself would impose a naval blockade of Iran from 13 April.^[898] Trump said on 17 April that the Hormuz strait is "COMPLETELY OPEN",^[889] but on 23 April Trump claimed that he is the one keeping it closed, because opening it would allow Iran to make "$500 million a day".^[899]

Reactions inside the US were overall negative but split along party lines, with the majority of Republicans supporting the war and the majority of Democratic and independent voters opposing it.^{[900][901]} Pundits split similarly, although some notable right-wing pundits such as Matt Walsh opposed it.^[902]

Media coverage

Before hostilities erupted, media attention on US-Iran tensions increased in early 2026, following failed nuclear talks and reports of Iranian domestic unrest. Outlets such as CNN and The New York Times detailed US military buildups in the region, speculating about possible attacks.^[877]

As the airstrikes began, initial reporting relied heavily on satellite imagery and official briefings. The Pentagon's announcements of the destruction of Iranian assets were widely echoed, but independent verification proved difficult due to Tehran's communications restrictions.^[903]

Disinformation and propaganda

The White House faced backlash over a video that mixed real war footage with video game clips.^[863] Critics said such efforts distorted public understanding.^[904] The Trump administration's use of copyrighted video game clips, cartoon characters, and blockbuster movie scenes for Iran messaging risked turning war into entertainment and a spectacle.^[905]

The White House circulates videos fusing real airstrike footages with visuals from video games and action movies, "transforming acts of destruction into a spectacle of national triumph", keeping the audience detached from the human suffering it produces.^[906] A video from the White House drew widespread criticism and bewilderment. Another clip used Kesha's song "Blow" under the footage of an airstrike, which prompted the singer to protest against the "perverts".^[907] Blase Cupich, an American Catholic Cardinal who is close with Pope Leo XIV, referred to a video released by the White House of attacks on Iran mixed with Hollywood film clips as "horrifying" and "sickening".^[908]

United States media and government

On 14 March 2026, Federal Communications Commission Chairman Brendan Carr, a Trump appointee, warned broadcasters that those who "perpetrate fake news and distort the news" must "take the right course" or risk losing their licenses at renewal.^{[909][910]} Carr said broadcasters "must act in the public interest, and if they don't, they will lose their licenses," citing the public's low trust in legacy media and past election coverage problems. Trump expressed that he was "enthusiastic" about Carr's stance.^[911]

Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth also criticized the coverage during a news conference, taking issue with CNN's reporting and suggesting emphasizing Iranian frustration rather than adding to the headlines.^[912] Democratic lawmakers condemned the FCC's remarks as unconstitutional censorship, with many calling it "oppressive" and a violation of the First Amendment.^[913]

Impact

Coverage of the war influenced public opinion, with the US public showing mixed support amid economic concerns.^[914]

Criticism

Analysts accused Western media of failing to challenge the official narrative, with Mondoweiss highlighting the flattering language that downplayed civilian casualties.^[904] Al Jazeera noted the overrepresentation of voices from the pro-war Iranian diaspora.^[915] Pre-war coverage was also marred by inadequate public warnings.^[916]

International

The IAEA Board of Governors convened an emergency meeting as requested by the Russian Federation on 2 March.^[917] IAEA expressed "deep concern" amid attacks on Iranian nuclear facilities, including the Bushehr Nuclear Power Plant.^[918] The head of the World Health Organization condemned the attacks. The secretary general of Amnesty International described such actions as potential war crimes.^[919]

According to the founding chief prosecutor of the International Criminal Court (ICC) Luis Moreno Ocampo, the war was comparable to Russia's war in Ukraine, adding that the world is going from a "rules-based system" to the "rule of the man", which was "not a viable world".^[920]

European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen and Council President Antonio Costa called the conflict "greatly concerning" and urged restraint.^[921] On 1 March 2026 Von der Leyen advocated a "credible transition" of power.^{[922][923]} After Trump's threats to destroy Iranian infrastructure if the Strait of Hormuz was not reopened on

A spokesperson stated that NATO was closely watching, while a senior official stated that NATO's vigilance was heightened.^{[926][927]} NATO secretary general Mark Rutte said that Europe is supportive of the war, as Iran was a threat.^[928] He also said that he felt that the US "knows what it is doing".^[929]

Some countries expressed support for the Israeli–United States actions, including Argentina, Ukraine, Albania,^[930] the Czech Republic,^[931] Kosovo,^[930] North Macedonia,^[930] Paraguay,^[932] and Papua New Guinea,^[933] among other countries which made less explicit statements of support.^[934]

The war was condemned by progressive and left-wing parties, as well as trade unions, anti-war organizations, and some far-right parties worldwide. Some far-right movements at the European Conservatives and Reformists Group (such as AfD, Vlaams Belang, ANO, National Rally, Brothers of Italy, etc.) criticized the war as against international law and the national interests of European countries, while others (such as Vox, Reform UK, Fidesz, Law and Justice) supported the actions in the name of the free world.^{[935][936]}

After initially opposing war, on 16 March, Gulf countries urged the US to neutralise Iran due to Iranian strikes on their territories.^{[937][938]} On 19 March, several Arab states asked for a discussion in the UN Human Rights Council to discuss Iran's strikes on civilians and energy infrastructure in the region.^{[939][940]}

Iran's retaliations were condemned by Bahrain, Cyprus, Egypt, India, Kuwait, the Palestinian Authority, Qatar,^[921] Saudi Arabia,^[941] Syria, Turkey,^[942] the UAE,^[921] as well as by several other EU countries,^[943] and France, Germany, and the United Kingdom, who issued a joint declaration. The United Kingdom permitted the US to use British military bases for defensive purposes. Portugal permitted the US to use Lajes Field for defensive purposes, and France sent its aircraft carrier towards the Mediterranean.^[942] Ireland,^[944] Slovenia,^[943] and Vatican City.^[945] In addition to condemnations,^[943] Spain denied the use of its military bases for US flights connected to the offensive.^[946] On 20 March 2026, the UK approved the US to use British bases to attack Iranian missile sites targeting vessels in the Strait of Hormuz.^[947]

Canada abstained from joining in US-led Israel war in Iran. On 5 March 2026, France authorized the use of French bases. Mixed reactions or calls for peace were made by South Africa,^[948] Azerbaijan,^[949] Lebanon.^{[950][951][921]}

In Pakistan, the army was deployed to suppress an escalation of violence during pro-Iranian protests in the northern cities of Gilgit and Skardu, especially after Shiite demonstrators attacked on 1 March the offices of the UN Military Observer Group at Azad Kashmir. Similar action was taken in Sindh during the attack on the US consulate in Karachi.^[952] There have been movements between Saudi Arabia and Pakistan due to the Strategic Mutual Defence Agreement between both countries, as it "states that any aggression against either country shall be considered an aggression against both".

On 11 March 2026, the United Nations Security Council passed Resolution 2817, sponsored by Bahrain, which called for Iran to stop its attack on Gulf states and condemned the strikes as a violation of international law. The resolution did not mention US–Israel strikes on Iran and Lebanon.^{[953][954]}

Message (in Greek) from President of Cyprus, Nikos Christodoulides, following the first Iranian strikes on Cyprus on 2 March 2026

Media coverage

Initial coverage in Arab media, including Al Jazeera, emphasized the risks of regional spread, citing attacks on Gulf states. Al Jazeera noted the overrepresentation of voices from the pro-war Iranian diaspora in Western media.^[915]

Diplomatic efforts

On March 1, 2026, Trump claimed that Iranian leaders wanted to resume negotiations and that he had agreed.^[955] The late Ali Larijani, Secretary of the Supreme National Security Council of Iran, ruled out talks.^{[956][957]} Trump then wrote, on March 6: "There will be no deal with Iran except UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER!"^[958] On March 21, it was reported that the US was preparing for peace talks, with six demands. However, Iran refused to negotiate, and had previously rejected several of the demands.^{[959][960]}

On March 23, Trump postponed the ultimatum he had given on reopening the Strait of Hormuz, citing "very good and productive conversations" with Iran.^[961] He said the US had been speaking to "a top person" in Iran.^[962] IRGC-affiliated Fars News reported that no negotiations had taken place.^[961] Tasnim News Agency, affiliated with the IRGC, suggested that the US was trying to sow division within Iran by proposing secret talks with only part of its political establishment.^[963] Iran International, affiliated with the Iranian opposition, suggested that Trump was deliberately being vague and not naming which Iranians were negotiating, as a way to sow mistrust and division within the Iranian regime.^[962] The Iranian foreign ministry said it was reviewing US proposals sent through mediators.^[964]

Ebrahim Zolfaghari, spokesman for Khatam al-Anbiya Central Headquarters, rejected negotiations and said the US must accept "that regional stability is guaranteed by Iran's armed forces".^[965]

On March 25, Pakistani officials passed on a "15-point proposal" from the US to Iran.^[966] The US proposal included an end to Iran's nuclear program, limits on its missiles, reopening the Strait of Hormuz, restrictions on Iran's support for armed groups, and sanctions relief for Iran. The Iranians rejected the proposal. The Iranians issued a "5-point counter-proposal", including an end to US-Israeli attacks on Iran and pro-Iranian forces in Lebanon and Iraq, security guarantees to prevent future Israeli and US aggression, war reparations, and international recognition of Iranian sovereignty over the Strait of Hormuz.^[967] The US rejected the proposal.^[968]

In early April Trump threatened to destroy Iran's power plants, oil wells and desalination plants if a deal was not reached "shortly" and the strait not reopened "immediately".^[969] On the same day, Iranian parliament speaker Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf said that Iran would not give in to "surrender" terms from the US. He accused Washington of sending mixed signals, saying, "The enemy publicly sends messages of negotiation and dialogue, and in secret plans for a ground attack".^[970] On March 30, the Iranian foreign ministry acknowledged they had been holding indirect talks with the US through Pakistani intermediaries.^[971] By contrast, Qatar declined an offer to lead the negotiations.^{[972][973]}

Trump claimed on April 1 that Iran had just asked the US for a ceasefire. He said the US would consider it once the Strait of Hormuz was "open, free, and clear".^[969] The IRGC separately said that strait "will not be opened to the enemies of this nation".^[969] On April 5, Trump again threatened to attack Iran's power plants and bridges if the Hormuz Strait was not reopened. The following day, indirect talks in Islamabad led to a proposal for a 45-day ceasefire. Iran declined, calling for a permanent solution. An Iranian proposal, included a protocol for reopening the strait, an end to all conflicts, the lifting of sanctions, and reconstruction. Later that day, Trump said "They made a ... significant proposal. Not good enough...."^[974] On April 7, Trump threatened, "A whole civilization will die tonight, never to be brought back", if Iran did not reach an agreement with the US.^{[975][976]} Administration officials later confirmed the post was improvisational, and not part of a national security plan.^[977]

Analysis

Military analysts have generally described Iran as being more resilient to US-Israeli attacks than anticipated, and have identified several unanticipated consequences of the attacks for US global interests, chiefly the disruption of international trade brought about by Iran's closure of the Strait of Hormuz. Many experts argue that the war is illegal under US law,^[978] a claim that the Trump administration has rebuked, citing the precedent of unauthorized military actions by prior presidential administrations.^[979] In international criminal law, experts have identified the attacks as a crime of aggression,^{[980][981]} specifically as a war of aggression.^{[982][983]} Numerous critics and analysts identified the US-Israeli attack with a more open embrace of expansionism^{[984][985]} and imperialism by the Trump administration,^{[986][987]} and a departure from the norms of the liberal international order.^[988]

Accessed 29 April 2026. "With a ceasefire in Iran taking effect early Wednesday morning, the full scope of the Israeli-American 40-day campaign against the Islamic Republic began to emerge.... Iran, during the fighting, launched some 650 ballistic missiles at Israel. According to the military, more than half of the missiles carried cluster bomb warheads, which spread bomblets indiscriminately over wide areas. The missile attacks killed 20 Israeli civilians and foreign nationals in Israel, along with four Palestinians in the West Bank.... In all, at least 16 missiles carrying conventional warheads — with hundreds of kilograms of explosives — struck populated areas in Israel, causing extensive damage. There were also some 50 incidents of missiles carrying cluster bomb warheads hitting populated areas, with hundreds of separate impact sites.... All 24 fatalities from Iran's missile attacks were civilians, and all but two were not inside bomb shelters. Cluster munitions killed 10, and conventional missiles killed 14."

Since 28 February 2026, the United States and Israel have been engaged in a war with Iran and its regional allies. The conflict began when the US and Israel launched airstrikes on Iran, targeting military and government sites and assassinating several Iranian officials, including Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei. The surprise attacks were launched during negotiations between Iran and the US regarding Iran's nuclear program. Iran responded with missile and drone strikes on Israel, US bases, and US-allied Arab countries in West Asia; and the closure of the Strait of Hormuz, disrupting global trade.

Israeli-US airstrikes damaged military bases, government buildings, schools, hospitals, and heritage sites and resulted in civilian casualties.^[68] In retaliation, Iran launched hundreds of drones and ballistic missiles at Israel, US military bases in the region, and at neighbouring Arab countries including Bahrain, Jordan, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, and the United Arab Emirates.^{[69][70]} Iran and its proxies launched strikes on Iraq's Kurdistan. Drones or missiles also appeared to target Azerbaijan, Turkey, and Britain's Akrotiri military base on Cyprus.^[71] The conflict between Hezbollah and Israel escalated into the 2026 Lebanon war, killing more than 2,000 civilians and militants.^{[72][73]} Iran has since restricted internet access to its people, allowing access only for government-approved users.

The Trump administration gave diverse explanations for starting the war:^[74] to forestall Iranian retaliation after an expected Israeli attack,^{[75][76][77][78]} to stop an imminent Iranian threat, to destroy Iran's missile capabilities, to prevent Iran from building a nuclear weapon,^[79] to seize Iran's oil resources,^{[80][81]} and to achieve regime change by bringing the Iranian opposition to power.^{[82][83][84][85]} Iranian and some US officials rejected claims that Iran had been preparing an attack.^{[86][87]} The International Atomic Energy Agency said that, while Iran has refused to allow inspections of its damaged sites after the 2025 war, there was no evidence of an ongoing nuclear weapons program.^[88] United Nations secretary-general António Guterres and several uninvolved countries condemned the US–Israeli strikes; the UN Security Council passed a resolution condemning Iran's retaliatory strikes on the Gulf states.^[89] Critics of the war, including legal and international relations experts, described the US attacks as illegal under US law, an act of imperialism,^{[90][91]} and a violation of Iran's sovereignty^{[92][93]} under international law.^[94]

The war's economic impact includes the world's biggest oil supply disruption since the 1970s energy crisis,^[95] surges in oil and gas prices, disruptions in aviation and tourism, and volatility in financial markets. Oil and gas shipments were disrupted by Iran's closure of the Hormuz Strait and Israeli and Iranian attacks on energy facilities.^{[96][97][98]} On 19 March, the cost of the war to the US military was estimated at US$18 billion,^[99] and the Pentagon requested a further US$200 billion.^[100] By 31 March, the cost to Arab countries was estimated at over US$120 billion.^[101] The Iranian government assessed the damage to their own economy as at least $300 billion and possibly as much as $1 trillion by 11 April.^[102] The US, Israel and Iran all implemented censorship to hide the damage they had suffered.

US president Donald Trump controversially claimed victory several times^{[103][104]} and claimed the Iranian military had been destroyed.^{[105][106]} Trump then repeatedly threatened to destroy Iran's infrastructure and "civilization" if they did not make a deal with the US and re-open the Strait of Hormuz.^{[107][108]} Iran, the US and Israel agreed to a two-week ceasefire brokered by Pakistan, beginning on 8 April.^[109] The ceasefire came under strain as Iran refused to re-open the Hormuz strait, blaming the Israeli strikes in Lebanon.^[110] After the failure of the Islamabad Talks, Trump said he no longer cared about negotiations,^[111] and announced a naval blockade of Iran from 13 April.^[112] A ceasefire in Lebanon began on 16 April.^[113] Iran announced that commercial shipping

The operation will be delayed briefly to assess the potential for a "complete and final agreement" with Iran.^[122] On the same day, Trump stated that if Iran fails to agree to an agreement to end the war, the U.S. will escalate bombing significantly in terms of intensity and level.^[123] The US military announced on the same day that it disabled an Iranian-flagged oil tanker in the Gulf of Oman for allegedly trying to breach the American blockade en route to an Iranian port.^[124]

Background

Iran's relations with the United States and Israel

A US- and UK-backed coup d'état in 1953 deposed Iranian prime minister Mohammad Mosaddegh due to his nationalization of the oil industry, strengthening the rule of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Israel maintained ties with Iran as part of its alliance of the periphery strategy. Resentment of the Shah's deference to Western interests and his autocratic rule led to the 1979 revolution in which Pahlavi was overthrown and replaced by an Islamic republic.^{[125][126]} Iran severed diplomatic ties with the US and Israel and held the American embassy staff hostage for over a year.^{[127][128]}

During the Iran–Iraq War, the US supported Iraq. In 1988, a US warship was struck by an Iranian mine; the US responded by attacking Iran's navy. A few months later, the US mistakenly shot down a civilian Iranian flight.^[129] Iran started a ballistic missile program to deter Iraqi missile attacks on Iranian cities and to compensate for its lack of a modern air force due to sanctions.^{[130][131]}

Starting in the 1980s, Iran began engaging in proxy conflicts throughout the Middle East. Iran backed Hezbollah in Lebanon against Israel during and after the Lebanese Civil War. During the Iraq War, Iran supported militias fighting the US in Iraq. Along with the Houthis in Yemen and other groups in Syria and Palestine, these proxy groups became part of the informal 'Axis of Resistance' committed to countering American, Israeli, Saudi, and Emirati influence in the region.

In 2002, Iran's covert expansion of its nuclear program was first revealed. Beginning in 2006, the United Nations Security Council responded with a series of sanctions against Iran, with the US imposing its own series of sanctions against Iran. The US and Israel conducted a campaign of cyberwarfare against Iranian nuclear facilities to disrupt their operations, while Israel assassinated several top Iranian nuclear scientists.^{[129][132]} The conflict escalated in January 2020 when President Trump ordered the assassination of Qasem Soleimani, the commander of the Quds Force.^{[127][131]}

Tensions escalated following the October 7 attacks on Israel and the start of the Gaza war. Israel fought Iran-backed militias across the Middle East, including Hamas^[z], Hezbollah, and the Houthis. Israeli strikes on the Iranian consulate in Damascus and the assassination of Ismail Haniyeh were met with Iranian strikes on Israel in April and October. In June 2025, Israel launched the Twelve-Day War by attacking Iranian military and nuclear facilities, provoking Iranian counter-strikes. The US also struck Iranian nuclear facilities during the Twelve-Day War, which ended in a ceasefire.^[135]

In early 2026, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu lobbied President Donald Trump for a joint military strike on Iran, specifically targeting its leadership.^[136] Following high-level meetings in February, Trump authorized "Operation Epic Fury", with reports citing Israeli intelligence provided by Netanyahu as a decisive factor in the decision.^[137]

Iran nuclear issue

Iran suspended its AMAD Project pursuant to Ali Khamenei's fatwa against nuclear weapons in 2003. Khamenei banned nuclear weapons of any kind.^{[138][139]} Iran said it was not seeking nuclear weapons, and that its enrichment efforts were to generate nuclear power for civilian use.^[140] UN Security Council (UNSC) concerns about Iran's nuclear program from 2006^[aa] led to the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA) between Iran and the US in 2015.^[144]

Despite Iran's compliance with the JCPOA,^[145] Trump withdrew the US from the deal in 2018,^[146] re-imposed sanctions, and adopted a "maximum pressure" strategy.^[147] The Biden administration kept most of these sanctions in place, further damaging Iran's economy.^[148] Trump continued the "maximum pressure" approach in his second term.^[149] In September 2025, the UN reimposed sanctions on Iran using the "snapback" mechanism, causing the currency to weaken, resulting in price increases for food supplies such as meat, rice, and other staples, freezing Iranian assets abroad, suspending arms transactions, and imposing penalties related to the country's ballistic-missile programme.^{[150][151]} Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent labelled the collapse of the Iranian currency in December 2025 as the strategy's "grand culmination".^{[152][153]} At his State of the Union Address on 24 February 2026, Trump claimed that Iran had restarted its nuclear program and was developing missiles capable of striking the US.^[154] Trump's claims about Iran rebuilding its nuclear program and developing long-range ballistic missiles have contradicted both his previous claims that Iran's nuclear program was "obliterated" and US intelligence reports that Iran did not pose any military threat towards the US and needed until 2035 to build such missiles were it to do so.^[155]

A few days later, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) reported that Iran had stored highly enriched uranium in an underground facility that was undamaged by US bombings in 2025.^[156] Subsequently, Iran denied the IAEA access to nuclear facilities that had been bombed, but did provide access at least once to all unaffected facilities since June 2025.^[157] Mohammad Eslami, the head of the Atomic Energy Organization of Iran, said Iran would not permit inspections of facilities struck by the US until the IAEA established rules for the post-war situation, insisting on codified protocols for internationally protected facilities subjected to military attacks, and that the IAEA condemn the attacks.^[158]

In February 2026, Iran informed the IAEA that normal safeguards were "legally untenable and materially impracticable," as a result of threats and "acts of aggression," leaving the IAEA unable to verify whether Iran had suspended enrichment or confirm the status of its current stockpile,^[157] though it found no evidence Iran was weaponizing.^[159] Analysts in the UK and US have characterized Iran's strategy as nuclear hedging, developing the technical infrastructure to assemble a weapon on short notice while stopping short of actual production.^[160] The Bulletin of Atomic Scientists said that Iran was using its enrichment program and uranium stockpiles for leverage in international negotiations, and was willing to dilute or export its higher-level enriched uranium in exchange for sanctions relief and prevention of future attacks.^[161]

Israel nuclear issue

Israel is widely believed to possess nuclear weapons, with a stockpile estimated between 90 and 400 nuclear warheads.^[172] Israel is the only nuclear-armed country that does not officially acknowledge its nuclear weapons capability.^[173] Some scholars have argued that Israel's nuclear weapons have incentivized Iran to develop its own nuclear program, seen as maintaining a balance of nuclear deterrence, or causing a regional nuclear arms race.^{[174][175][176][177]} Citing security threats, Israel rejects international calls to accede to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons or to participate in negotiations of a Middle East nuclear weapon free zone.^{[178][179][180]} This has frustrated both US^[173] and UK^[181] diplomatic efforts on such a zone. Scholars also suggest US tacit acceptance of the Israeli nuclear weapons capability is seen as a double standard that undermines its diplomatic credibility in Middle East nonproliferation negotiations.^{[182][173][183]}

Prelude

Tensions between Iran and the United States over Iran's nuclear program began to intensify in January 2026 amid Iran's massacres of Iranian civilians in their crackdown of the 2025–2026 anti-government protests.^[184] The US and Iran began indirect negotiations in February in Oman, but produced no agreement. The US began amassing air and naval assets in the region at a level not seen since the outset of the 2003 US-led invasion of Iraq. The US government signaled that airstrikes remained an option, emphasizing that all responses were under consideration while maintaining that diplomacy was still preferred.^[185] US president Donald Trump and his administration officials like Vice President JD Vance, Secretary of State Marco Rubio, and Special Envoy Steve Witkoff all accused Iran of building up its nuclear and missile programs to threaten the United States and its interests. Iran in turn accused the US of waging "disinformation and misinformation" campaigns against it.^{[186][187][188][189]}

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu successfully lobbied the Trump administration for military intervention.

Regional actors, including Qatar, cautioned that any escalation could have severe consequences for the Middle East. Negotiations regarding the Iranian nuclear program were held in February, and on 28 February 2026 the US and Israel conducted military strikes in Iran.^[190]

Hostilities

First week (28 February – 6 March)

On 27 February at 3:38 p.m. EST (11:08 p.m. IRST), Donald Trump, traveling on Air Force One to Corpus Christi, Texas, gave the order to proceed with Operation Epic Fury.^{[191][192]} US missiles, drones, and Israeli fighter jets began striking Iran the next day, around 9:45 a.m. IRST (1:15 a.m. EST).^{[193][194]} The strikes took place during active negotiations over Iran's nuclear program.^{[195][196]} The attacks coincided with the holy month of Ramadan, during which Muslims fast from dawn to sunset.^[197]

28 February: Trump addresses the nation about the strikes.

The operation was codenamed Operation Roaring Lion^[ab] by Israel.^{[198][199]} The Israeli Air Force (IAF) said that it had struck 500 military targets in western and central Iran in the largest combat sortie in its history.^[200] Iranian naval vessels were also targeted.^[201] Israel later said its initial strikes used over 1,200 bombs in 24 hours.^[202] A US official said dozens of US strikes were carried out by planes based around the Middle East and from one or more aircraft carriers.^[203]

According to Iran International, quoting the Iranian Students' News Agency, thousands of Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) personnel, including several senior officials,^[204] were killed or wounded as several military bases were attacked.^[205] Several strikes hit Tehran's Pasteur Street district, where the presidential palace is, and the National Security Council.^{[206][207]}

The strikes were coupled with cyberattacks on Iranian infrastructure, media, and phone apps, with messages calling on Iranians to rise up against their government.^{[208][209][210]} The cyberattacks resulted in a near-total internet blackout in Iran, lasting over 60 hours with connectivity dropping to as low as 1% of normal levels, disrupting government communications, state media, and public services.^{[211][209]} Iran has since restricted internet access to its people, allowing access only for government-approved users.^{[212][213]}

Israeli military officials said months-long planning preceded their strikes, allowing them to pinpoint their targets, attain "tactical surprise", and gain US support.^[214] Attacking during the morning, rather than at night which was when most of Israel's previous attacks on Iran took place, added to the element of surprise.^[215] After the strikes began, Israel declared a state of emergency, citing expectation of an Iranian retaliation, and warned its citizens to remain in protected areas.^{[216][217]} Israel called up 20,000 reservists in addition to the 50,000 already on duty.^[218] The Israeli Ministry of Health moved its hospital operations underground.^[219] Israel warned Iranian civilians residing near military industries and infrastructure to evacuate immediately.^[205]

At 2:30 a.m. EST on 28 February, Donald Trump released an eight-minute video statement on Truth Social, saying that the purpose of the US strikes in Iran was effectively regime change. Trump said that Iran's "menacing activities" endangered the US and its allies. He cited the Iran hostage crisis, support for proxies such as Hamas and Hezbollah, and its killings of protesters.^[220] Trump cited Iran calling "Death to America" and its alleged history of attacking US civilians and soldiers as evidence of Iran's intent against the United States.^{[79][221]}

Trump and Benjamin Netanyahu both warned of the potential threat of nuclear weapons in Iran and called on the Iranian people to overthrow their government.^{[220][222]} The Times of Israel reported that Defense Minister Israel Katz labeled the strikes a "pre-emptive attack" intended to "remove threats to the State of Israel".^[216] Iran rejected claims that it intended to attack the United States, citing the aggressive posture of the US armed forces as evidence.^[86]

Iranian forces reacted within hours by launching missiles and drones. Iran codenamed its military response Operation True Promise IV.^{[ac][ad]} Iranian state media also dubbed the events as the Ramadan War,^[ae] as the US-Israeli attacks coincided with the holy month of Ramadan.^[223]

Iran struck Israeli targets in Tel Aviv and Haifa^[224] as well as multiple countries throughout the Persian Gulf region.^[225] Major targets included Bahrain's capital Manama,^{[226][227]} Kuwait International Airport, the United Arab Emirates' capital Abu Dhabi,^{[228][229]} Riyadh and Eastern Province in Saudi Arabia,^[230] and Erbil International Airport and the US Consulate General in Erbil in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq.^[231]

Major US military bases and installations in the Middle East, including bases used during the strikes

Iran reported striking the US bases of Al Udeid Air Base in Qatar, Ali Al Salem Air Base in Kuwait,^[232] Al Dhafra Air Base in the UAE, and the US Navy Fifth Fleet headquarters in Bahrain.^[233] Local sources said Iran used Shahed drones, which are among the weapons most used by Iran and its proxies, including Hamas and Hezbollah.^[234] On 1 or 2 March, Iran struck the radar bases for US THAAD missile defense systems in Jordan, the UAE and Saudi Arabia, destroying at least one of them.^[235]

Israel launched a new wave of strikes against Iranian targets.^[236] Iran launched missiles and drones on Bahrain, Israel, Jordan, Kuwait, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, and the UAE.^{[237][238]} The United Kingdom reported "two missiles fired in the direction of Cyprus", but that they "don't believe they were targeted at Cyprus". However, the presidents of Cyprus and Northern Cyprus both denied the claims that any missiles were fired at Cyprus.^{[239][240][241]} Two oil tankers, the Palau-flagged Skylight and the Marshall Islands-flagged MKD VYOM, were targeted off the coast of Oman.^{[242][243][244]} Shipping through the Strait of Hormuz slowed to a standstill,^[245] with 150 freight ships, including many oil tankers, stalled.^[246]

To avert further Iranian strikes, the E3 (the UK, France, and Germany) resolved to back, if needed, "proportionate military defensive measures" against drones and ballistic missiles, signaling the potential for direct involvement.^[247] British prime minister Keir Starmer said that US can use British bases for "defensive" strikes on Iran^[248] and disclosed that Ukrainian and other specialists would aid Gulf efforts to foil Iranian drone strikes.^[249] CNN reported that Saudi Crown Prince Salman, with US backing, vowed to employ military force against further Iranian incursions, calling Iranian strikes "cowardly" due to Saudi airspace being closed to US and Israeli attackers.^[250] On 1 March, Trump announced that the US had accepted an Iranian proposal to further negotiations.^[251] However, Ali Larijani subsequently ruled out talks.^[252]

Trump issued letters to Congress leaders according to the 1973 War Powers Resolution.^[253]

On 2 March, the US embassy in Kuwait was struck and subsequently closed indefinitely; no casualties were reported.^{[254][255]} The US-flagged tanker Stena Imperative and the Honduras-flagged tanker Athe Nova were also struck.^[256] A senior official and advisor to the IRGC commander said he would set fire to any ship coming through the Strait of Hormuz, and added that no oil will leave the area.^[257]

Qatar shot down two Iranian Su-24 bombers, making it the first nation to shoot down an Iranian aircraft in the conflict.^[258] The Qatari Ministry of Defense announced that Ras Laffan Industrial City and Mesaieed Industrial Area were struck by two Iranian drones.^[259] On 6 March, it was reported that according to satellite imagery analysis by both Bloomberg and the Energy Economics and Society Research Institute in Tokyo, Ras Laffan, the main gas facility in Qatar, appeared to have not been damaged before the "unprecedented shutdown" which sent fuel prices higher.^[260]

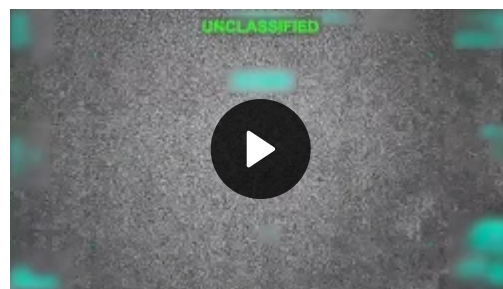

The United States and Israel attacked the Natanz Nuclear Facility^[261] and the Iranian media reported damage to the Khatam-al-Anbia and Gandhi hospitals.^[262] A friendly fire incident took place when the pilot of an F/A-18 of the Kuwait Air Force shot down three US F-15E fighters.^{[263][264][265][255]} Israel and Hezbollah exchanged strikes.^[266] Hezbollah began firing rockets and missiles on Israel in retaliation for the killing of Khamenei.^{[267][268]} Hezbollah later claimed that the attack was a "defensive act" after over a year of Israeli attacks despite a 2024 truce.^[269] It added that it restarted fighting to force Israel to stop its aggression and evacuate from seized Lebanese territories, emphasizing that the move was unrelated to the war.^[270]

Lebanon banned military activities by Hezbollah after the attacks.^[271] An IDF spokesperson issued an emergency statement stating that the attack is to be considered "an official declaration of war by Hezbollah", vowing to "neutralize" the threat.^[266] Israel struck southern Lebanon,^{[272][273][274]} Beirut, and the Beqaa Valley.^[266] The IDF said that it killed the head of Hezbollah's intelligence headquarters Hussein Makled in the strikes.^{[275][276]} In Lebanon, the IDF killed Adham Adnan al-Othman, the head of Palestinian Islamic Jihad's armed wing, Al-Quds Brigades, in Lebanon.^[277]

The Royal Air Force station at Akrotiri, Cyprus, was targeted by a drone strike around midnight local time, with one causing minor damage.^{[278][279][280][281]} Another strike on Cyprus led to Greece announcing that they would deploy frigates and F-16s to defend Cyprus from any further strikes by Iran.^[282] The pro-Iran militant group Guardians of the Blood Brigade claimed responsibility for attacks on the US Victory Base near Baghdad International Airport and Erbil, Kurdistan Region, Iraq.^{[50][283][284]} The Islamic Resistance in Iraq claimed responsibility for over 23 drone strikes on US assets in Erbil.^[285]

On 3 March, US and Israeli strikes reportedly destroyed the Supreme National Security Council (SNSC) headquarters,^[286] the Expediency Discernment Council building in Tehran,^[287] and what Israeli officials described as an underground nuclear weapons facility called Min Zada.^[288] The proximity of these strikes to the Bushehr Nuclear Power Plant (about 12 km (7.5 mi) away) prompted the Russian agency Rosatom to suspend construction on new units and evacuate non-essential staff due to a loss of communication with Iranian officials.^[289]

US officials said US forces severely damaged Iran's naval capabilities, mainly in the Gulf of Oman, where several Iranian warships have reportedly been destroyed and key bases hit.^{[290][291]} Debris from an airstrike damaged Golestan Palace, a UNESCO World Heritage Site,^[292] causing UNESCO to issue a statement that damaging UNESCO property is against international law.^[293]

2 March: Montage of US Central Command strikes

2 March: Damage to residential buildings in Sanandaj, Iranian Kurdistan

3 March: Enghelab Square, Tehran

Israel Katz authorized a ground invasion of Lebanon on 3 March.^{[294][295]} They were later followed by a ground incursion in southern Lebanon with forces from the 91st Division with the goal to establish a "security layer" for the Israeli residents of northern settlements against Hezbollah, expecting to destroy their infrastructure in the Israel-Lebanon border. The Lebanese government reported that such Israeli preventive attacks reached Kfarkela and Qouzah, provoking the Lebanese army to do a redeployment from newly established border posts amid escalating Israeli activity in violation of the 2024 Israel–Lebanon ceasefire agreement.^[296] Israel also reported that it killed Daoud Alizadeh, the commander of the Quds Force's Lebanon branch, in Tehran.^[297]

Western diplomats and other sources told The Jerusalem Post that Qatar had struck Iran after Iran had attempted to strike Doha's airport and Qatar shot down two Iranian Su-24 bombers;^[298] Channel 12 also reported Qatari strikes.^[299] Qatari Foreign Ministry spokesperson Majed al-Ansari denied the accusation that Qatar had joined the "campaign targeting Iran".^[300] An IRGC general warned it would hit all economic hubs in the Middle East,^{[301][302]} and Abbas Araghchi said that any defensive European military involvement would be considered an act of war.^{[303][304]}

An Israeli Air Force F-35I "Adir" shot down an Iranian Yak-130, the first kill of a crewed aircraft by an F-35.

On 4 March, US secretary of state Marco Rubio announced that the US-Israeli attacks on Iran would increase in their intensity.^[305] Israel attacks hit the Basij headquarters.^[306] Mojtaba Khamenei survived an airstrike.^[307] The IDF announced that an F-35I "Adir" shot down a Russian-made Iranian Yak-130 fighter jet over Tehran, the first time that an F-35 has ever shot down a crewed fighter jet in air-to-air combat and the first time the Israeli Air Force shot down an aircraft since 1985.^[308]

Iran launched strikes against the Al Udeid Air Base,^[309] as well as Aramco's Ras Tanura oil refining facility.^[310] The United States ordered the evacuation of non-essential workers in Cyprus in anticipation of Iranian strikes and issued a travel warning for the country.^{[311][312]} A ballistic missile launched from Iranian territory was intercepted by NATO integrated air defense systems as it entered Turkish airspace, marking a significant escalation in the regional conflict.^[313] Turkey asserted its right to self-defense after the missile landed in Dörtyol, Hatay Province,^[314] and NATO secretary general Mark Rutte stated that the alliance was committed to defending Turkey.^[315]

An Iranian Navy frigate, IRIS Dena, was sunk in the Indian Ocean by United States Navy submarine USS Charlotte, about 40 nautical miles (74 km; 46 mi) south of Galle, Sri Lanka. The vessel was returning to Iran following its participation in the International Fleet Review 2026 and the multilateral Exercise MILAN at Visakhapatnam, India.^{[316][317][318]} The exercise required participating ships not to carry any ammunition, and the US likely knew the Dena was defenseless, since it also sent a maritime patrol aircraft to participate.^[319] It was the first ship sunk by a submarine in active combat since the Falklands War, and the first by an American submarine since World War II.^{[af][322]} According to the Iranian army, 104 Iranians were killed and 32 were injured from this attack.^[323]

4 March: Buildings in Tehran damaged by US-Israeli strikes

4 March: USS Charlotte torpedoed IRIS Dena

The frigate Cristóbal Colón, sent by Spain to protect Cyprus from aerial threats

The government of Azerbaijan said on 5 March that two drones from Iran struck Azerbaijan's Nakhchivan exclave^[324] damaging an airport and injuring two civilians.^[325] Keir Starmer confirmed that the UK's bases on Cyprus would be used to defend the airspace of Jordan from Iranian drones,^{[326][327]} while Italy, the Netherlands and Spain confirmed that they would be sending warships to defend Cyprus.^{[328][329][330]} Ireland stated that they would be willing to protect Cyprus and join the European defense coalition that had mobilized around the island if requested.^[331] The IDF killed Hamas official Wassim Attallah al-Ali in Beddawi, Lebanon.^[332]

Trump said on 6 March that there are "no time limits" for how long the war will continue for,^[333] and Hegseth stated that the war has "only just begun".^[334] The Iranian tanker IRIS Bushehr was interned by the Sri Lanka Navy, marking the first instance of a warship being interned in a neutral country since World War II.^[335]

Second week (7–13 March)

Six dead US soldiers from the 2026 Port Shuaiba drone attack are transferred to the US on 7 March 2026.

On 7 March, the US sent a third aircraft carrier, USS George H. W. Bush, to the Middle East.^{[336][337][338]} The British aircraft carrier HMS Prince of Wales was placed on advanced readiness to defend British interests in the region.^[339] Pezeshkian told reporters on 7 March that Iran would stop striking neighbors from 7 March onwards unless an attack originated from there.^[340] Despite this, Dubai International Airport was later attacked by Iranian drones.^[341] NDTV reported that following a week's hostilities, Iran might only have around one thousand ballistic missiles left.^[342] On 7 March, ballistic missiles were fired from Bahrain toward Iran, likely by US forces.^[343]

6 March: The aftermath of US-Israeli airstrikes in Tehran

On 8 March, Khamenei's second son, Mojtaba, was designated as Iran's new supreme leader.^[344] Also on 8 March, US Central Command posted a message on X in Persian and Arabic which "strongly urge[s] civilians in Iran to stay at home" and alleging that "[t]he Iranian regime is knowingly endangering innocent lives by using heavily populated civilian areas to conduct military operations, including launching one-way attack drones and ballistic missiles".^[345]

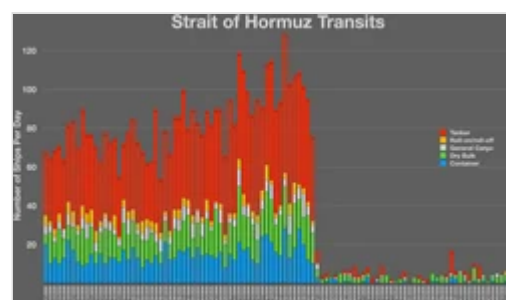

Israeli airstrikes hit some of Iran's oil storage facilities, killing four people.^[346] Strikes on fuel depots near Tehran caused a "river of fire" to pour out along the streets in the surrounding area,^[347] and the city became engulfed in a cloud of thick black smoke, causing black toxic acidic rain to fall in the surrounding area.^[348] Residents were advised by Iranian authorities to stay indoors, wear masks when outside, and conserve food and fuel.^[349] Kuwait reported that two of its officers were killed while performing duties.^{[350][351]} The Saudi Civil Defense agency said that a strike on a compound in Al-Kharj killed two people and injured 12 others.^[352] US Central Command announced the death of a seventh US service member from an Iranian attack.^[353]

The United Kingdom's Ministry of Defense confirmed that its forces had intercepted an Iranian drone headed towards Iraq. Additionally, the Ministry declared their intention to send a Merlin helicopter to the region to help aid in detecting future aerial threats.^[354] According to the Iranian Red Crescent Society, a total of 65 schools and

32 medical facilities (such as hospitals and pharmacies) have been targeted since the war started, and more than 10,000 civilian sites have been damaged.^[355] On 9 March, NATO confirmed the interception of a second ballistic missile over Turkish air space,^[356] landing in the area of Gaziantep.^[357] Meanwhile, Turkey deployed six F-16s and air defence systems to Northern Cyprus to ensure its security.^[358]

Trump claimed that "the war is very complete, pretty much", after speaking with Russian president Vladimir Putin,^[359] and said "we already won the war in many ways."^[360] He additionally claimed that the Strait of Hormuz was open but also expressed interest in taking it over from Iran.^[361] Trump later went back on some of his comments during a press conference held later that day, supporting Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth in stating that the war was just the "beginning of building a new country" and that it would end "soon".^[362] However, Trump also said that the US will have the "most intense day" of strikes on Tuesday.^[363] Following Syrian president Ahmed al-Sharaa's support for the Lebanon's objective to disarm Hezbollah,^[364] the group targeted the city of Inkhil in Syria.^[365] About a dozen B-1B bombers arrived at bases in Europe. Five landed at the Fairford Royal Air Force base, UK, joining three B-52 bombers, while three others were redirected to Ramstein Air Base, Germany.^[366]

GPS jamming of uncertain origin has disrupted navigation of ships near the Strait of Hormuz, which may lead to disastrous accidents for oil tankers.^[368] The United States Department of State (supported by Saudi Arabia)^[369] designated the Muslim Brotherhood branch in Sudan (a Sudanese Islamist organization) as a terrorist organization due to its nexus with the Axis of Resistance.^[370] Members of their militia fought alongside the IRGC due to the contacts established with the Al-Bara' ibn Malik Battalion during the Iranian intervention in Sudan.^[371] On 10 March, a senior IRGC commander stated that Iran was only firing missiles with payloads of 1,000 kg or more.^[372] AFP reported that Iran's attacks were the "most intense and heaviest" since the start of the war.^[373] This shows a shift in tactics from saturating air defences to high-impact penetration strikes.^[372] On the same day, top American general Dan Caine acknowledged that Iran was fighting back, but not harder than the U.S. expected before the war.^[374]

Strait of Hormuz transits dropped significantly since the start of the war.^[367]

Following the Syrian presidency's support for the disarmament of Hezbollah and a campaign of mobilization by the Syrian army on the Lebanese border,^{[364][375]} shells from Lebanon landed in the town of Serghaya, 20 km (12 mi) from Damascus where the Syrian Armed Forces forces presided.^[376] The strikes were confirmed by the Operations Authority of the Syrian Army.^[377] Later in the day, Israel issued an urgent evacuation notice to southern suburbs of Beirut.^[378]

US admiral Brad Cooper reported that Iran's ballistic missile launch rate fell 90% from day one of the war and their drone launch rate fell 83%.^[379] Defense analyst AJ Jaff reported that the missile launch rate fell 92% (480 to 40) and the drone launch rate fell 92% (720 to 60).^[380] On 11 March 11 B-1 and three B-52 US bombers were deployed to RAF Fairford in the UK, where long-range photography showed bombs being prepared for loading. This followed US war secretary Pete Hegseth's statement that it was the "most intense day of strikes inside Iran", though the targets of the mission remain unknown.^[381]

A branch of Bank Sepah in Tehran was hit by a strike, prompting the IRGC to warn that in the future, they could retaliate by striking US or Israeli banks in the region.^[382] Iran hit Stryker, a US-based medical supply company with a cyber attack.^[383] On 12 March, UNICEF reported that more than 1,100 children were injured or killed (200 reportedly killed in Iran, 91 in Lebanon, 4 in Israel, and 1 in Kuwait), hundreds of thousands displaced, and millions unable to attend schools from the violence of the war since it started. It also noted that these numbers will likely increase.^[384]

Iranian deputy intelligence minister Akbar Ghaffari was killed in an airstrike.^[385] An Iranian attack set two oil tankers on fire off the Iraqi coast, killing one person and prompting Iraq to suspend all oil terminal operations.^[386] The historical Safavid-era building of Rashk-e Jenan, also known as the Rashk Palace, was destroyed by direct US-Israeli strikes.^[387] Other buildings that were damaged according to Ruhollah Seyed al-Asgari, the deputy director of cultural heritage for Isfahan province, include Chehel Sotoun pavilion, the Rakib Khaneh Mansion, the Timurid Hall, the Ashraf Hall and the windows of Ali Qapu palace.^[388] Many of the affected buildings and monuments were legally protected by the Blue Shield International,^[389] which called damaging such sites a war crime.^[390] Six French soldiers were injured in a drone strike at a base in Mala Qara, Iraqi Kurdistan. French president Emmanuel Macron announced on 13 March that one French soldier was killed in the attack.^[391]

Also on 13 March, to help deal with the economic costs of the war, the US temporarily lifted restrictions on the sale of Russian oil. However, oil prices have barely been affected by this.^[392] Iran announced a coordinated offensive by IRGC Navy, the Iranian Army, and Hezbollah against Israel and US bases.^[393] Israel reported that 58 people have been hospitalized due to injuries following a missile strike.^[392] Iran again targeted Gulf countries with missiles and drones, causing oil prices to rise. Bahrain reported attacks on fuel tanks. Two people were injured when a "hostile drone" struck a residential building in Kuwait. The Kuwaiti authorities also stated that defense equipment and the country's main international airport were attacked, and six power lines were reported to have gone out of service. AFP reported that explosions were heard in downtown Dubai. At the same time, the British Maritime Trade Operations Agency said a container ship was attacked 35 nautical miles (65 kilometers) north of Jebel Ali in the UAE. According to Al Jazeera Arabic, sirens went off in every city across Jordan.^[394]

Satellite imagery of black smoke rising from the Port of Salalah on 13 March during the 2026 Iranian strikes on Oman.

For the third time in the war, ballistic missiles entered Turkish air space and were intercepted, with explosions heard in the proximity of the city of Adana as well as sirens from Incirlik Air Base.^[395] Israel struck several IRGC checkpoints in Iran. According to Reuters, Israel attacked the checkpoints after receiving tip-offs by on the ground informants. Reuters also reported Israel had struck positions of the Basij used to suppress Iranian protests.^[396]

Third week (14–20 March)

As of the third week, analysts found little evidence of significant defections or desertions in the Iranian military;^[ag] military defections have been considered a necessary condition for regime change.^[406] The US conducted a large-scale attack on Kharg Island, a key oil export hub home to 90 percent of Iran's oil exports. Over 90 military sites were targeted while the oil infrastructure was not targeted "for reasons of decency", according to Trump. Oil prices have risen over 40 percent since the start of the war.^[407] According to CENTCOM, around 90 military targets were struck, while the island's oil infrastructure was not targeted.^[408] On 14 March, Kata'ib Hezbollah security commander Abu Ali al-Askari was killed in an airstrike in Baghdad, according to the group.^[409]

The first two floors of the Royal Tulip Al Rasheed Hotel in Baghdad's Green Zone were hit by a drone whilst hosting a European Union and Saudi Arabian delegation. The attack was not claimed by anyone; however, due to the proximity of a similar attack that had happened 48 hours earlier on the US embassy in Baghdad, there were suspicions of it being an Iranian attack.^[410]

On 16 March, both China and US-aligned NATO nations in Europe rejected Trump's call to provide military support to reopen the Strait of Hormuz.^{[411][412]} Trump rebuked his NATO allies, calling their decision a "very foolish mistake".^[413] On 17 March, Trump made a statement on Truth Social renouncing NATO's assistance, and unexpectedly, US allies in the Indo-Pacific, namely Japan, South Korea, and Australia, for refusing to join US-led attacks on Iran during the war.^{[414][415][416][417]} In the same statement, Trump declared that the United States "[does] not need the help of anyone" regarding the war.^[418]

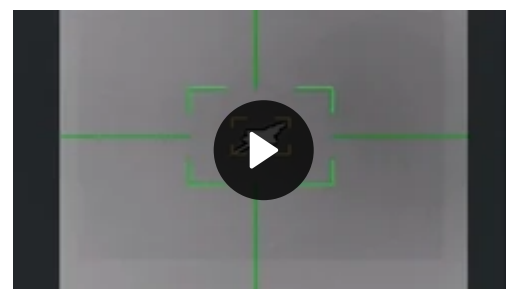

In the early morning of 17 March, several senior Iranian officials, including Ali Larijani and Basij chief Gholamreza Soleimani were targeted by Israeli airstrikes.^{[419][420]} Both their deaths were later confirmed by Iranian state media.^[421] In response, Iran launched a missile barrage that killed two Israeli civilians in Ramat Gan.^[422] The same day, Israel launched a ground invasion of southern Lebanon.^[423]

On 18 March, in a major escalation,^[424] Israel struck the South Pars natural gas field in the Persian Gulf and its neighboring refineries in Iran with US coordination.^[425] In retaliation, Iran attacked the world's largest LNG production facility in Qatar. Trump claimed he was not aware of the South Pars attack, promised that there would be no more Israeli attacks on Iranian oil infrastructure, and threatened Iran not to continue attacking Qatari energy infrastructure.^{[424][426]} On the same day, Israel said it had killed Iranian intelligence minister Esmail Khatib in an overnight airstrike.^[427] Pezeshkian confirmed Khatib's killing on the same day.^[428] A hair salon in Beit Awwa was struck by a projectile, killing four women and injuring six,^[429] with Israeli authorities stating that it was most likely cluster munitions and Palestinian authorities saying it was an errant Israeli interceptor.^{[430][431]}

On 19 March, a US F-35 made an emergency landing after a suspected hit by Iranian forces.^{[432][433]} A BAZAN Group refinery in Haifa was hit during a broader Iranian missile attack on the area as a retaliation for Israeli attacks on South Pars gas facilities.^{[434][435]} Netanyahu insisted that "You can't make a revolution from the air" and that "there must be a ground component — I won't share with you all the options", implying that there was a potential for limited assault operations involving soldiers on the ground in Iran.^[436] The US began an aerial campaign against Iranian vessels and drones in the Strait of Hormuz as part of an effort to reopen it to international shipping.^[437]

Fourth week (21–27 March)

Admiral Brad Cooper said that the US military had so far struck more than 8,000 Iranian military targets, including 130 vessels.^[438] On 21 March, the US conducted strikes on the Natanz Nuclear Facility using bunker buster bombs to target the site.^[439] Russia condemned the strikes on Natanz as a "blatant violation of international law," while the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) urged military restraint "to avoid any risk of a nuclear accident".^[440] In response, Iran struck the southern Israeli town of Dimona, injuring at least 78 people.^[441] Iran said that it targeted the Shimon Peres Negev Nuclear Research Center.^{[442][443]}

Citing unnamed US officials, CNN and The Wall Street Journal reported that Iran unsuccessfully attempted to strike the joint US–UK military base at Diego Garcia on the Chagos Islands in the British Indian Ocean Territory.^[444] The report said one of the missiles broke apart mid-flight, while another was intercepted by a SM-3

air defence missile launched by a US warship.^{[445][446]} Israel said that Iran used a two-stage intercontinental ballistic missile to target the island.^{[447][448]} Iran denied launching missiles towards Diego Garcia, saying that it was an Israeli false flag attack.^[449] No evidence has been presented that the alleged Iranian missiles neared Diego Garcia or that one was intercepted.^[450]

The Houthi movement in Yemen warned that it would respond to any escalation against Iran, including efforts to reopen the Strait of Hormuz. It specifically warned the two Arab countries offering to join the Strait of Hormuz campaign—Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates—that they "will be the first to lose in this battle".^[451] The Houthis further threatened to join the war in the event that US allies joined the attack on Iran or if the US and Israel used the Red Sea to carry out operations.^[452] Lebanon's government expelled the Iranian ambassador.^[453]

Israeli troops near the Lebanese border on 21 March 2026

Trump issued an ultimatum to Iran, threatening to strike its power plants unless it opened the Strait of Hormuz within 48 hours.^[454] Iran doubled down, threatening to "completely" close the Strait of Hormuz and strike vital infrastructure across the region such as energy and desalination facilities critical for drinking water.^[455] Iranian opposition figure and former crown prince Reza Pahlavi called on Trump and Netanyahu to target the military while sparing civilian infrastructure which "Iranians will need to rebuild our country".^[456] Halfway through the deadline, Trump announced that he was postponing strikes against Iranian power plants for five days,^[457] and said the US was negotiating with Iran to end the war.^[458] Iran denied the talks ever took place or were taking place and called the president "deceitful".^[459] Iran rejected the 15-point peace plan presented by the US.^{[460][461]} Iran asserted that Lebanon must be included as part of a ceasefire deal, thereby making a ceasefire conditional on an end to the 2026 Lebanon war against Hezbollah.^[462]

On 24 March, Israel or its allies shot down an Iranian missile crossing above Lebanon at high altitude, according to the Lebanese army, which also confirmed that the missile was not targeting Lebanon. This was the first time during the current conflict when a shootdown of an Iranian missile took place over Lebanese territory.^{[463][464]}

A US strike on the Habbaniya military base—which hosts units from the Popular Mobilization Forces—in Al Anbar Governorate killed seven members of the Iraqi Armed Forces and injured 13 others. In response, Iraqi prime minister Mohammed Shia' al-Sudani summoned the US embassy's chargé d'affaires in Baghdad.^[465] Iranian state media threatened that Iran could seize Bahraini and Emirati territory if the US "makes any mistakes", while signaling its readiness to open a new front in Yemen by closing the Bab al-Mandab with the Houthis.^{[466][467]} Israel said it killed Iran's top naval commander, Alireza Tangsiri, purportedly as part of an effort to reopen the Strait of Hormuz, which Katz said Tangsiri was "directly responsible" for the closure of.^{[468][469][470]}

On 27 March, a day after Trump and Hegseth announced the "neutralization" of Iran's military, an Iranian missile and drone strike on Prince Sultan Air Base damaged several US refueling aircraft and injured at least 15 US soldiers. An E-3 Sentry was also damaged by the strike.^{[471][472][473]} Military analyst Cedric Leighton described the attack as a "a serious blow to [US] surveillance capabilities".^[474] Iran showed no signs of ceding its control over the Strait of Hormuz.^[475] The same day, Iran blocked two Chinese ships from entering the strait and sought to formalize fees for ships passing through it.^{[476][477]} Despite pushes for talks, Israeli Defense Minister Israel Katz publicly vowed to "intensify and expand" Israeli attacks in Iran.^[478] The same day, the Shahid Khondab Heavy Water Complex in Arak, which has in the past been used to test uranium enrichment, and the Ardakan yellowcake production plant in Yazd Province were confirmed to have been damaged in Israeli airstrikes.^{[479][480]}

Fifth week (28 March – 3 April)

The Houthis joined the war on 28 March launching a ballistic missile towards Israel.^[481] The Houthis said that they had launched ballistic missiles targeting "sensitive" military sites in Israel, and vowed to continue the attacks "until the aggression on all resistance fronts stops". The missile was intercepted and no casualties were reported.^[482] The Houthis subsequently launched a second missile at Eilat.^[483] In response, the internationally recognized Yemeni government condemned Iran's "frequent attempts to drag Yemen" into conflict "through its terrorist militias".^[484] On the same day, 2,500 US marines from the 31st Marine Expeditionary Unit arrived in the Middle East. They are intended to be part of the effort to open the Strait of Hormuz.^[485]

US Central Command stated that it had struck over 11,000 targets in Iran since the beginning of the war. On 28 March, joint US–Israeli airstrikes severely damaged several residential and civilian facilities, including the Iran University of Science and Technology.^[486] In response, Iran threatened to attack Israeli and American colleges across the Middle East.^[487] Airstrikes also struck a 10,000-cubic-meter water reservoir in Haftkel, in Khuzestan province.^[488]

An Iranian missile struck a chemical plant in the Ne'ot Hovav industrial zone, injuring one person and causing fears of a hazardous leak.^[489] A convoy of the Iraqi Popular Mobilization Forces was seen entering Khorramshahr in southwestern Iran.^[490] Eleven-year-old child soldier Alireza Jafari died following an Israeli drone strike.^[491]

On 29 March, Trump stated that he would prefer to "take the oil in Iran". He proposed taking Iran's oil export center, Kharg Island, claiming that the United States could capture the territory "very easily", and implying that the US could occupy it for some time.^[80]

On 30 March, Trump said on Truth Social that if a deal was not reached soon and the Strait of Hormuz reopened, the US would conclude the war by destroying all of Iran's power plants, oil wells, Kharg Island, and possibly all its desalinization plants,^[492] although the feasibility and strategic value of some of Trump's threats were contested.^[493] On the same day Turkey and NATO intercepted the fourth missile directed towards Turkish territory. Iran denied firing a missile at Turkey, claiming that it was a false flag attack.^{[494][495]} The US began flying B-52 bombers over Iranian territory for the first time, indicating its confidence of air supremacy over Iran.^[496] The US used bombers to target an ammunition depot and air base in Isfahan, causing vast explosions.^[497] U.S.-allied Gulf states such as Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Kuwait, and Bahrain reportedly pushed Trump to continue the war until there are significant changes in Iran's leadership.^[498] American journalist Shelly Kittleson was kidnapped in Baghdad by Kata'ib Hezbollah—the strongest faction within the PMF—who demanded that the Iraqi government release several detained members of the group.^[499]

On 1 April, Mehr News Agency, a semi-official Iranian government news outlet, reported that policy expert and former foreign minister Kamal Kharazi was seriously injured and his wife was killed in an airstrike which hit his home.^[500] Iranian officials described the attack as an attempt to derail diplomacy, noting that Kharazi was overseeing a possible meeting between Iranian officials and US vice president JD Vance.^[501] Airstrikes on the strategically important Hengam Island in the Strait of Hormuz caused seven injuries.^[502] Trump indicated that he was no longer concerned about Iran's enriched uranium buried underground.^[503] Netanyahu asserted that the US–Israeli strikes have eliminated Iran's ability to produce nuclear weapons and ballistic missiles, thereby removing "two existential threats" to Israel.^[504] The Iranian president Pezeshkian published an open letter to US citizens.^[505]

Late in the day on 1 April, Trump made a speech addressing the nation, in which he said that the strikes have "dramatically curtailed" Iranian missile and drone systems, and added that the attacks on Iran will escalate over the next two to three weeks to "bring them back to the Stone Ages, where they belong".^[506]

On 2 April, two US strikes on the B1 bridge between Tehran and Karaj, which was described as the highest bridge in the Middle East, reportedly killed eight people and wounded 95 others, causing it to collapse.^[507] Trump gloated on the attack, which experts assessed as a possible war crime.^[508] At the time of the attack, many Iranian families had been gathered in the parks below the bridge to celebrate Sizdah Be-dar.^[509]

Iran revealed major damage to the century-old medical center Pasteur Institute of Iran. US Defense Secretary Hegseth boasted of "death and destruction from the sky all day long".^[508] The IDF also announced that one of its strikes in the Kermanshah area of Iran killed Iranian ballistics missile chief Makram Atimi and several battalion commanders from Atimi's central Iranian ballistic missile unit.^{[510][511]} An Iranian ballistic missile strike damaged an Israeli drone factory in Petah Tikva.^{[512][513][514]}

On 3 April, Iranian forces shot down a US Air Force F-15E Strike Eagle fighter jet over the country, with the wreckage falling in the Kohgiluyeh and Boyer-Ahmad province of Iran,^[515] prompting a search and rescue mission by US helicopters.^[516] The pilot was rescued that same day, but the WSO remained missing and was rescued alive 48 hours later.^[517]

A US A-10 "Warthog" aircraft was downed and its single crew member ejected near the Strait of Hormuz and was rescued.^[518] Iran released a video showing shooting down the aircraft using surface-to-air missile.^[519]

On the same day, Tehran's Shahid Beheshti University was hit by airstrikes, making the total number of universities hit to more than 30, according to the Iranian Minister of Science.^[520]

Sixth week (4–7 April)

On 4 April, explosions were reported at an auxiliary building of the Bushehr Nuclear Power Plant as well as the Mahshahr Special Petrochemical Zone in Mahshahr, Iran.^[521] The airstrikes in Mahshahr killed at least five and injured 170 others.^[522] An Iranian missile strike hit in the vicinity of the IDF's HaKiryat headquarters in Tel Aviv.^[523]

On 5 April, after heavy fighting, the second stranded crew member from the F-15E downed on 3 April was recovered by US forces in a rescue operation, which resulted in damage to helicopters, the shooting down of an A-10 Thunderbolt II,^[524] and the destruction of two C-130 Hercules, three IRGC members killed, and several American service members injured.^[517]

On 6 April, the IRGC announced that the head of the IRGC's intelligence organisation, Major General Majid Khademi, had been killed in a joint U.S.-Israeli airstrike. Their statement claimed that Khademi had "played a major role in Iran's intelligence and security apparatus over nearly five decades".^[525] Israel claimed that Yazdan Mir, a high-ranking commander of the IRGC Quds Force, had also been killed in the attacks.^[526]

On the same day, before Trump's deadline for targeting Iranian infrastructure,^[527] Israel carried out strikes on the South Pars Petrochemical facility in Asaluyeh, Iran.^[528] The Israeli Air Force claimed that "85% of Iran's petrochemical exports" had been taken offline by now.^[529]

At least 34 people, including six children, were killed in US-Israeli airstrikes across Iran, including against Sharif University of Technology and residential areas. Iranian vice president and reformist politician Mohammad Reza Aref, who is also an alumnus of the university, described the alleged use of a bunker-buster bomb as a "symbol of Trump's madness and ignorance".^[530]

7 April 2026 Truth Social post in which Trump threatened, "A whole civilization will die tonight, never to be brought back again."

On 7 April, The Rafi'-Nia synagogue in central Tehran was destroyed in an airstrike.^[531] Israel said that the building was destroyed due to collateral damage and that it was never meant to be the direct target of the airstrike.^[532] The same day, US forces began strikes on Kharg Island.^[533] In response, Iran said its restraint in targeting oil infrastructure in the region would no longer apply.^[534] Trump posted to Truth Social that "a whole civilization will die tonight, never to be brought back again",^[535] causing international concern that Trump would use nuclear weapons. The Secretary General of Amnesty International said that Trump's statement "may constitute a threat to commit genocide".^[536] Multiple right-wing commentators and many Democrats condemned the post, and some called for him to be removed through the 25th Amendment.^{[537][538]} The White House denied considering using nuclear weapons.^[539] The White House later said that "only the president knows" what he would do on Iran.^[540]

Ceasefire (8 April – present)

On 7 April at 6:32 p.m. Eastern Time in the US (8 April, 1:32 a.m. in Israel and 8 April, 2:02 a.m. in Iran), President Trump announced on Truth Social that the US and Iran had reached an agreement based on the 10-point proposal mediated by Pakistani Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and Field Marshal Asim Munir,^[541] writing on Truth Social that Iran had sent the US a 10-point proposal, which the US believes is a "workable basis on which to negotiate".^[542] The US, Israel, and Iran agreed to a two-week ceasefire, under which Iran would also re-open the Strait of Hormuz; while the announcement occurred on 7 April in Washington, the acceptance and official implementation took effect on 8 April local time in the Middle East.^[543]

After the ceasefire announcement, Iran's Lavan Island oil refinery and Sirri Island crude export facilities were struck by an "enemy attack". No party claimed responsibility.^[544] In response, Iran continued to conduct missile and drone strikes on Gulf Arab states such as Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Kuwait, Qatar, and Bahrain.^[545]

Israel and the US assert that the ceasefire does not include Lebanon,^{[546][547]} contradicting the Pakistani mediators and Iran.^[548] Hezbollah said that it halted attacks on Israel and on Israeli soldiers in Lebanon.^[549] Despite the ceasefire, Israel launched "Operation Eternal Darkness", which Israel said included wide-ranging operation targeting all of Hezbollah's command and control centers in southern Lebanon, Beirut and the Beqaa Valley.^[550] These were the largest attacks since the start of the war,^[551] killing at least 357 people and injuring more than 1,200 others.^{[552][553]} In Beirut alone, at least 92 people were killed and at least 742 others were injured.^[554] In response, Iran threatened to attack Israel "if the aggressions against dear Lebanon are not brought to an immediate end",^[555] Iranian media later said that Iran paused Hormuz traffic over Israeli attacks in Lebanon.^[556] Hezbollah claimed responsibility for launching rockets towards northern Israel as a response to "cease-fire violations".^[557]

Aftermath of 8 April 2026 Israeli attacks on Beirut, Lebanon

On 11 April, Trump said that American forces had started "clearing" the Strait of Hormuz.^[558] Iran claimed that an American ship on its way to the strait turned back after being warned.^[559] The Wall Street Journal reported that several US Navy destroyers entered the strait for the first time since the war began. A US official described it as an "operation that focused on freedom of navigation through international waters". The Iranian government reportedly threatened to attack the ships, accusing the US of a ceasefire violation.^{[560][561]} US Central Command said the ships are taking part in minesweeping.^[562] On the same day, the talks between the US and Iran—the highest-level discussions between the two countries since the 1979 Islamic Revolution—were held in Islamabad,

Pakistan, lasting 21 hours, after which JD Vance announced that no agreement had been reached, stating that Iran had refused "to accept our terms."^[563] Afterwards, Trump said that he no longer cared about negotiations with Iran.^[111]

Trump declared that the US Navy would begin its own blockade of "all Ships trying to enter, or leave, the Strait of Hormuz" from 13 April. He also said the US Navy would stop any ships that paid tolls to Iran.^[564] However, United States Central Command clarified that the blockade would only be enforced on ships travelling to or from Iranian ports.^[565] The IRGC Navy said that any military vessel approaching the strait would be considered a ceasefire violation and would meet a "severe response."^[566] Trump threatened to strike any fast-attack ships of the IRGC Navy, similar to how the US carried out strikes against alleged drug traffickers during Operation Southern Spear.^[567]

According to a US analyst, Iran had 13 days of oil storage capacity, forcing it to shut down its oil fields thereafter and potentially damaging them.^[568] The same analyst estimated the loss of import and export capacity to $435 million USD per day.^[568]

On 14 April, at least four Iranian-linked ships traveled through the Strait of Hormuz, despite the US blockade, according to public transponder data seen by BBC Verify.^{[569][570]} Those ships later stopped or turned around, after presumed interception by the US Navy, according to shipping data firms and the Sydney Morning Herald.^[571] Later that day, a US official said that eight oil tankers sailing to or from Iranian ports had been intercepted since the start of the blockade, adding that all tankers complied with orders.^[572] Tankers leaving Chabahar Port were contacted by a US destroyer, while Boeing P-8 Poseidon patrol aircraft were also used to intercept tankers.^[572] On 16 April, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Dan Caine, announced that 13 oil tankers had been intercepted by the US Navy in its blockade of Iran, with all ships complying with US directions and no boarding needed.^[573]

On 16 April, President Trump announced that Israel and Lebanon agreed to a ten-day truce.^[113]

As a result of the ceasefire in Lebanon, on 17 April, Iran announced that passage of commercial vessels through the Strait of Hormuz would be allowed during the truce.^[114] Despite this, President Trump said that the US blockade of ships traveling to or from Iranian ports would continue.^[574] As a result of the US decision to continue its blockade, Iran announced that it would re-impose restrictions on the Strait of Hormuz.^{[575][576][115]} Meanwhile, the US stated that its blockade had intercepted 23 ships traveling to or from Iranian ports.^[577]

On 19 April, Trump sent two negotiators to Pakistan, saying that planned talks were Iran's "last chance" to reach a deal.^[578] He threatened that Iran would be "blown up" if the negotiations fail, saying the US will target power plants and bridges.^[579]

The US Navy seized an Iranian cargo ship on 19 April, saying it was attempting to evade their blockade. Trump said that a US guided-missile destroyer fired at the ship, damaging its engine room.^{[580][581]} Iran called this seizure a breach of the ceasefire, which was due to end on 22 April.^[116] Iran retaliated by launching drones at US ships, although no damage was reported.^[582]

On 21 April, the Pentagon said that US soldiers boarded a sanctioned tanker in the Indo-Pacific region as part of an effort to disrupt ships providing support to Iran.^[583] Trump said the US military intercepted a "gift from China" to Iran. The Chinese foreign ministry stated that it "opposes any malicious association".^[584] The same day, Trump claimed the three Iranian nuclear sites are being watched by the US Space Force.^[585] JD Vance was expected to visit Islamabad for talks on 22 April, but the talks were paused by the US due to it not receiving a response from Iran.^[586]

A day before the ceasefire was due to end on 22 April, Trump said he will not extend the truce unless Iran agrees to a deal and said the US military was "raring to go", warning that bombing would resume soon.^[587] Hours before the ceasefire was due to end, Trump extended the truce, saying he did so at Pakistan's request, to allow time for an Iranian proposal to be submitted.^[118]

Hours after the ceasefire was extended, the Iranian Revolutionary Guard announced that it had seized two container ships and fired on one of them, causing "serious damage to the bridge". This was in response to the US seizing an Iranian ship three days earlier.^[588] On 22–23 April, three Iranian oil tankers were reportedly intercepted by the US in the eastern Indian Ocean^[589] and an Iranian-linked oil tanker was seized by the US.^[590] Later, Iranian state media reported that air defenses in Tehran engaged "small drones, micro-UAVs".^[591] On 23 April, Trump ordered the US Navy to destroy any Iranian boats laying mines in the Hormuz strait.^[117]

Despite the Iranian seizure of two cargo ships,^[119] Trump claimed on 23 April that the US fully controlled the Strait of Hormuz and said that he is the one keeping the strait closed, because opening it would allow Iran to "make $500 million a day".^[592] The Guardian described the situation as a "dual blockade", saying that while the US Navy was able to blockade Iranian ports, it had not been able to stop the Iranian blockade or open the strait to US allies.^[119] The same day, Trump announced that Israel and Lebanon agreed to a three-week extension of the ceasefire.^[593]

On 24 April, Iran said that it seized a ship suspected of collaborating with American military after the ship committed violations and ignored warnings.^[594] On 25 April, Trump said that he canceled the US negotiators' trip to Pakistan for negotiations with Iran.^[595]

On 1 May, Trump issued letters to congressional leaders according to the 1973 War Powers Resolution limiting conflicts to 60 days, that hostilities had ended so far, but conflict remains.^[253] On 3 May, Trump said that the US will help free up ships in the Strait of Hormuz beginning the next morning.^[120]

On 4 May, the Iranian military warned the US to keep out of Hormuz.^[121] The UAE and Oman said that they had intercepted Iranian ballistic missiles, cruise missiles, and drones on the same day.^{[596][597]} Iranian state media claimed that the Iranian navy fired two missiles and hit an American naval frigate in the Strait of Hormuz. CENTCOM denied that the missiles struck the ship.^{[598][599]} CENTCOM later reported that it destroyed six small boats launched by the Iranian military towards ships in the Strait of Hormuz.^[598] The UAE said that an Iranian drone strike on an oil processing plant in Fujairah caused a fire, injuring three Indian citizens.^[600] On 5 May, the UAE said that it dealt with missile and drone attacks from Iran for the second consecutive day. Iran denied conducting attacks against the UAE in recent days.^[601] On 6 May, President Trump announced a temporary halt in the US military's "Project Freedom" operation to reopen the Strait of Hormuz, citing "great progress" toward a potential agreement with Iran. Trump stated that the operation will be paused for "a short period" to determine whether a "complete and final agreement" with Iran could be achieved.^[122] On the same day, Trump warned that if Iran does not agree to an agreement to end the war, the United States will resume bombing at a "much higher level and intensity".^[123] The US military said on the same day that it crippled an Iranian-flagged oil tanker in the Gulf of Oman after it allegedly attempted to breach the American blockade and cruise toward an Iranian port.^[124]

Strikes and casualties

Iran

The US and Israel eliminated many Iranian commanders and leaders on the war's first day due to a successful deception. IT caused Iran to believe that strikes were not imminent. Thus, groups of senior Iranian officials continued gathering in person. These gatherings were targeted in initial strikes. One part of the deception was

information about a US F-22 deployment leaked to hide that preparations were more advanced at other bases.^{[602][603]} Calls between Trump and Netanyahu before the war were not publicised to diminish the possibility of an Iranian first strike.^[603]

IDF Spokesperson Brigadier General Effie Defrin stated that months of joint US and Israeli "strategic and operational deception" of satellite imagery led up to the war. This encompassed planes and other facilities. The night of the initial strike he and IDF Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Eyal Zamir took their official cars home from IDF Headquarters.^[602] They came back without them so that satellite imagery would show that their base did not appear full nor warplanes appear armed and ready.^{[604][605]} Three separate gatherings of Iranian regime officials were hit within half a minute of each other in the opening strike.^[603]

Assassination of Ali Khamenei

On 28 February 2026, Ali Khamenei, the supreme leader of Iran, was assassinated in an Israeli air attack.^{[606][603]} On 1 March, Iranian state media announced Khamenei's death.^[607] The IRGC-controlled Fars News Agency, announced that Khamenei's daughter, son-in-law, grandchild, and daughter-in-law Zahra Haddad-Adel had also been killed.^{[608][609][610]} The Iranian government declared 40 days of mourning.^[611]

Military and officials

The initial dead included Iranian defense minister Aziz Nasirzadeh, and four top Ministry of Intelligence officials.^[612]

Additional senior officials included Salah Asadi, head of intelligence for Iran's emergency command, Mohammad Shirazi, head of Khamenei's military office, head of the Organization of Defensive Innovation and Research (SPND) Hossein Jabal Amelian, former SPND head Reza Mozaffari Nia,^[205] and chief of staff Abdolrahim Mousavi, among 40 official as reported by intelligence and military sources.^[613]

On 13 March, IDF estimated that between 3,000 and 4,000 Iranian soldiers and commanders had been killed.^[614]

On 17 March, Israel assassinated Ali Larijani, secretary of Iran's Supreme National Security Council.^[421] IRGC commander Mohammad Pakpour and Defence Council secretary Ali Shamkhani were reported dead in late March.^[615]

On 18 March, the Hengaw Organization for Human Rights estimated that 5,300+ members of the Iranian military had been killed.^[616]

On 31 March, Iran International reported that at least 4,700 security forces had been killed.^[617]

On 6 April, the head of IRGC intelligence, Major General Majid Khademi, was assassinated in a joint U.S.-Israeli airstrike.^[525]

As of 7 April, Human Rights Activists in Iran (HRANA), a US-based non-governmental organization, reported 3,636 documented war deaths, including 1,701 civilians, 1,221 military personnel, and 714 unclassified. According to HRANA, "[i]t is believed that military casualties are significantly higher than the figures reported in [its] reports" as confirmations depend largely on government data. Its count largely reflects reports of military personnel present in urban areas.^[618]

Civilians

On the first day of the war, the Shajareh Tayyebah girl's elementary school in Minab was hit by an American attack, according to Iran.^[619] The school was located near^[ah] the Sayyid al-Shuhada military complex,^[623] of which it had once been a part.^{[622][624]} While the number killed was not independently confirmed,^[625] Iranian state media reported that more than 175 people, mostly children, were killed while 95 were wounded.^[626] Video showed a Tomahawk missile hitting a building adjacent to the school;^[627] preliminary findings from an American military investigation indicated that the strike resulted from outdated targeting data.^[628]

At least 20 civilians, mostly families who gathered after breaking their fast at Ramadan,^[629] were killed in Tehran's Niloofar Square on 1 or 2 March, according to Iranian-state media.^[630] On 3 March, the Iranian Red Crescent Society said that over 600 civilians had been killed^[631] while HRANA reported 1,097 civilian deaths.^[632] On 7 March, the Red Crescent reported that over 6,668 civilian "units" had been targeted by US-Israeli strikes, including 5,535 residential units, 1,041 commercial units, 14 medical centers, 65 schools, and 13 centers affiliated with the Red Crescent.^[633] The Middle East Eye, an anti-Israel news outlet, reported that the US used double tap airstrikes,^{[634][635]} although the US denies this. As of 23 March, HRANA estimated that at least 15% of the casualties were under age 18.^[636]

An Israeli airstrike on 9 March in Resalat neighbourhood of Tehran destroyed a Basij-affiliated building as well as three residential buildings, killing 40 to 50. According to a BBC analysis, Israel used Mark 82 bombs in the attack.^[629]

As of 27 March, Iran has reported damage to at least 120 historical sites.^[637]

The deadly attack on residential buildings and a sports hall in the town of Lamerd killed 21 including 4 children and injured 100.^[638]

Institutions

The initial attack targeted Leadership House. On 2 March, video footage released by Iran International showed the destroyed IRGC Malek-Ashtar building in Tehran following a joint US-Israel missile strike.^[639] On 3 March, the complex of Islamic Republic of Iran Broadcasting (IRIB), the state broadcaster's headquarters, was hit in an Israeli air operation.^{[640][641]}

Iranian state-linked media indicated that Iran's parliament building was targeted.^[642] On 3 March, Israeli forces bombed the Assembly of Experts office building in Qom.^{[643][644]}

Infrastructure

By 5 March, the World Health Organization had identified 13 Iranian health sites hit, as well as one in Lebanon.^[645] The Iranian Foreign Minister said that the US had struck a desalination plant on Qeshm Island, disrupting water supply to 30 villages, but both the US and Israel denied an attack.^{[646][348]} The Russian consulate in Isfahan was damaged.^[647]

United States

On 1 March, six US soldiers were killed amid more than 30 injured in an Iranian drone attack near Camp Arifjan in Port Shuaiba, Kuwait. Those killed were soldiers of the United States Army Reserve assigned to the 103rd Expeditionary Sustainment Command, headquartered in Des Moines, Iowa.^[648] On 4 March, US Marine Corps Lance Corporal Kevin Melendez died in Saudi Arabia in a non-hostile incident.^[649] On 8 March, CENTCOM reported that a National Guard soldier died during a medical emergency.^[650] Sgt. Benjamin N. Pennington, a soldier of the 1st Space Brigade wounded in an attack against Prince Sultan Air Base in Saudi Arabia on 1 March, died from his injuries on 9 March.^[651]

Six American airmen were killed on 12 March when their KC-135 aerial refueling aircraft crashed in western Iraq. CENTCOM said that the crash was not the result of hostile action, but had resulted during an incident involving another US aircraft. By 13 March, the US military publicly announced that about 140 American servicemen had been injured.^[652] A 27 March attack on Prince Sultan Air Base damaged "multiple" refueling aircraft and destroyed a Boeing E-3 Sentry, as well as wounding at least 15 US soldiers.^{[653][654][473]}

The USS Gerald R. Ford, the largest aircraft carrier in theatre, was damaged by a fire that broke out 12 March. The US Navy said the fire had injured multiple sailors,^[ai] started in a laundry area and was not combat-related.^[659] The carrier had been dealing with other mechanical issues, including a malfunctioning sewage treatment system, since before it arrived in the Middle East.^[660] According to multiple reports on 17–18 March, Gerald R. Ford paused launching airstrikes and sailed toward the Crete Naval Base for repairs.^[656]

Many US military bases near Iran were rendered "all but uninhabitable" due to Iranian strikes. Within the war's first two weeks, Iran's attacks caused $800 million in damage to bases. Affected bases include Al-Sader and Al-Ruwais in the UAE, the naval base in Bahrain, Ali Al-Salem in Kuwait, Al-Udeid in Qatar, and Prince Sultan in Saudi Arabia. According to unnamed officials, the damage degraded the US's military ability in the war. Many US servicemembers relocated to "hotels and office spaces", which raised concerns of the US using civilians as human shields. An attack on a hotel in Bahrain injured two Pentagon employees.^[661]

Israel

The first attack struck a residential building, leaving one Israeli injured.^[662] Magen David Adom reported that Iran's initial attacks had left 89 injured, with three directly wounded and the rest indirectly, most of them civilians.^[663] On 28 February, a direct hit in Tel Aviv killed a woman and injured 22 others, one seriously.^[664] On 1 March, a strike hit a synagogue and residential buildings in Beit Shemesh, killing nine and injuring 49 others.^[665] On 9 March, two workers were killed in Yehud, outside of Tel Aviv, after they were struck by submunitions from an Iranian missile equipped with a cluster bomb warhead.^{[666][667]}

On 17 March, a cluster munition from an Iranian missile hit an apartment building in Ramat Gan and killed two residents. A statement from the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps called the barrage "revenge for the blood of martyr Dr. Ali Larijani and his companions", who had been killed the day before.^[668] According to CNN, the use of cluster munitions violates international law. N.R. Jenzen-Jones of Armament Research Services stated that this type of warhead is being used "primarily to sow terror amongst a civilian population".^[669]

The executive director of the Arms Control Association called the Iranian use of cluster munitions at residential sections of Israel during the war as deliberate, saying that "Iran appears to be launching them into relatively populated areas, probably with the goal of producing potential civilian harm."^[670] Neither Iran nor Israel is party to the Convention on Cluster Munitions,^[671] and both Israel and Iran are among 17 countries that either produce cluster munitions, or reserve the right to do so.^[672]

On 4 April, an Iranian missile strike hit in the vicinity of the IDF's Kirya headquarters in Tel Aviv.^[523]

Lebanon

More than 2,000 people were killed and over 4,000 were wounded by Israeli strikes in Lebanon,^[72] and Lebanon states more than one million people,^[673] 1/6th of the population,^[674] were displaced.^[675] During the war, six United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon peacekeepers were killed^[u] and 11 were injured.^{[v][49]}

Iraq

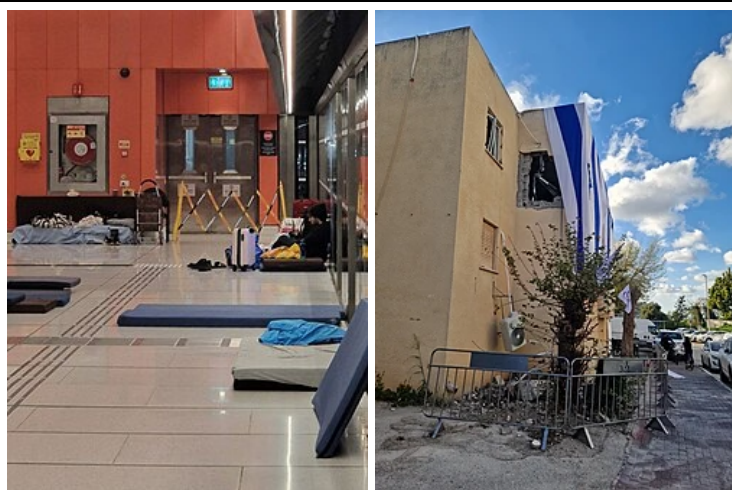

In Iraq, two members of the Iran-backed Popular Mobilization Forces (PMF) were killed and three injured in a US-Israeli attack on 28 February.^[676] A later report estimated three dead.^[677] On 1 and 2 March, the United States and Israel conducted several attacks on Iranian-backed Iraqi militias to degrade their military capabilities.^[678]

Iranian attacks on US-allied Arab countries

In addition to Israel, Iran launched strikes against multiple US-allied Arab countries. Iranian strikes against Bahrain killed three.^[680] Strikes against Kuwait killed four soldiers and four civilians.^[681] Strikes against Oman killed three.^[682] Strikes against Saudi Arabia killed two.^[683] Strikes against the United Arab Emirates killed two soldiers and six civilians.^[684]

Iran also struck Qatar,^[685] Azerbaijan,^[324] and the Akrotiri and Dhekelia British Overseas Territory on Cyprus.^[686]

The Iranian attacks affected military infrastructure from NATO countries in the region, "including an Italian installation in Iraq and Kuwait, and a French naval facility in the United Arab Emirates".^[687]

Direct impacts

Iran

Leadership

The death of Ali Khamenei triggered an election for a new supreme leader. Under the terms of Iran's constitution, an Interim Leadership Council was established on 1 March to exercise the functions of Iran's head of state until a new supreme leader is elected.^[236]

Mojtaba Khamenei was elected on 8 March 2026 to replace his father as supreme leader,^[722] and the IRGC, as well as Iran's top leaders, including Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf, Ali Larijani, and Masoud Pezeshkian,^[723] pledged their allegiance to him.^[724]

In late March, the NYT described Iran's leadership as paralyzed with severely disrupted decision-making process. It also reported that the damage to communications infrastructure caused paranoia and internal power struggles.^[725]

Civilian life

According to UN Human Rights Chief Volker Türk, the "reckless" war is disproportionately impacting civilians in the Middle East and beyond.^[726]

138,000 civilian sites in Iran were damaged during the conflict, with estimated time of reconstruction being 2 to 5 years.^[727]

As the US and Israel executed joint strikes targeting Iranian military and institutional targets, Iran's capital reportedly became a ghost town, as civilians feared going outside or to their daily jobs.^[728] Reports have emerged that prisoners in Evin Prison have been receiving limited bread and water since the onset of the war.^[729] After the strikes, schools were ordered closed while banks and government offices remained in operation at reduced capacity. Local media reported that subway and bus services would remain operational.^[730]

Residents in Tehran on the third day of US-Israeli airstrikes, 3 March 2026

Amid the renewed "near total" internet blackout in Iran, NetBlocks reported that internet connectivity in Iran dropped to 4% of ordinary levels.^{[625][731][732]} While the internet blackout has exceeded 240 hours, making it the second longest ever, the government started handing out "white sim cards", which bypass filters, to government supporters, in order to allow them to promote its messaging.^{[733][213]} As news of Khamenei's death broke, security forces were deployed to prevent an uprising, with footage showing them opening fire on celebrants in the streets^{[734][735][736]} and shooting at people chanting behind the windows of their homes.^[737]

During the first two weeks of March 2026, over 70,000 Afghan refugees returned to Afghanistan, frequently under forced circumstances, exacerbating the country's severe humanitarian crisis.^[738] Arafat Jamal, the UNHCR Representative in Afghanistan, noted that they faced limited options amid the military confrontations between Afghanistan and Pakistan.^[739]

According to The Guardian, the war has overshadowed the executions of political prisoners in Iran, including those involved in the mass protests of January 2026, allowing Iran to continue carrying out death sentences and other severe punishments with little international scrutiny.^[740]

Military

On 26 March, it was reported that children as young as 12 years of age may join Iran's war support, leading to concerns of the use of child soldiers.^{[741][742][743]} Days later, rights groups stated an 11-year-old was killed while on duty at a Tehran checkpoint.^[744]

On 29 March, footage showed Iraq's Popular Mobilization Forces deployed in Iran.^{[745][746][490]}

Kurdish–Iranian crisis

According to The Wall Street Journal, Trump had been open to supporting armed militias, particularly Kurds in Iran that have been in armed conflict with Tehran for decades^[298] and have historically been a regional ally of the United States.^[747] However, Trump later said he had ruled out sending the Kurds to Iran.^[748]

Cultural heritage sites

Multiple historic and cultural sites, including UNESCO World Heritage Sites, were damaged during the war. The most affected was Chehel Sotoun and its rich ayeneh-kari.^[749] On 2 March, a strike on Arg Square damaged nearby Golestan Palace, prompting UNESCO to issue a statement of concern.^{[750][751]} On 5 March, the Azadi Sport Complex was bombed.^[752] An 8 March strike on Falak-ol-Aflak, which was marked with a blue shield emblem, damaged several sections of the site.^[753] Strikes on Isfahan on 9 March damaged Naqsh-e Jahan Square, Chehel Sotoun, Ali Qapu, the Shah Mosque, Jameh Mosque, and Teymouri Hall.^{[754][753]} On 11 March, UNESCO urged protection for Iran's heritage sites and World Heritage Sites that have been damaged or are under high risk due to the war, alongside other historic sites in Israel, Lebanon, and across the Middle East.^[755]

Israel

Israel declared a nationwide state of emergency, saying that the strikes on Iran were the largest that it had ever launched.^{[216][756]} Israeli schools and workspaces were closed and public gatherings were canceled.^[757]

In the 40 days from the start of the war through the 8 April ceasefire, there were a total of 650 missile attacks from Iran to Israel, the majority of which carried cluster munitions. About 16 of the missiles that made it past Israeli missile defenses carried conventional warheads, while 50 had cluster munitions. The attacks killed a total of 24 people, all of them civilians, and resulted in more than 7,000 injuries. Of the 24 civilians killed, 14 were struck by warheads with conventional explosive warheads and 10 were victims of cluster submunitions; two of the deaths were inside a sheltered space, with the other fatalities being people in unprotected areas.^[758]

Palestine

The Israeli Coordinator of Government Activities in the Territories closed multiple aid crossings in the Gaza Strip, specifically interrupting free circulation on the Egypt–Gaza border.^[759] Israeli forces suspended United Nations humanitarian movements and postponed planned rotations of international humanitarian staff, including medical evacuations and the return of people into Gaza, which the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs condemned.^[760]

Israeli settler violence against Palestinians in occupied West Bank has increased; settlers have taken advantage of curbs on movement imposed during the renewed Israeli state of emergency. The renewed blocking of West Bank roads in the context of the 2026 Lebanon war has delayed medics from assisting injured Palestinians.^[761] The EU stated on 10 March that the Israeli actions were unacceptable and urged the Israeli authorities to make immediate efforts to prevent the violence against Palestinian civilians under international law, warning that "impunity for such acts risks provoking further violence".^[762]

Lebanon

As of 1 May, at least 2,618 people have been killed and 8,094 wounded by Israeli strikes in Lebanon during the 2026 Lebanon war.^[763] Internal Hezbollah sources said that over 1,000 Hezbollah fighters had been killed in the war^[764] while the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) said that it had killed 1,700 fighters.^[765]

According to Lebanon, over 1.2 million Lebanese nationals,^[766] corresponding to more than one-sixth of the country's population,^[767] were displaced.^{[768][769]} Over 40,000 homes in southern Lebanon have been destroyed.^[770] Israel's evacuation orders in Lebanon covered an area of over 1,470 square kilometres (570 sq mi), encompassing 14% of the country's territory. The displacement in Lebanon has been called one of the most severe and fastest-growing refugee crises worldwide.^[766] The war exacerbated the economic and humanitarian problems that have been ongoing in Lebanon since the 2019 financial crisis and 2020 Beirut explosion.^[771]

Gulf Arab states

The Arab states of the Persian Gulf started a campaign of prosecution against civilians and foreign citizens that shared or reposted rumours from unverified sources about the Iranian attacks, with the stated main goal to curb misinformation that could harm public order.^[772] Bahrain's Cyber Crime Directorate also started a campaign of arresting civilians in the country, which has a large Shiite minority, who allegedly expressed "their support for the Iranian shelling targeting the Kingdom of Bahrain", describing such activities as treason and as promotion of hostile acts against the state.^[773] Trump said "Even if we knew Gulf countries would be hit, big deal we did what we have to do".^[774]

Economic impacts

The war had global economic consequences: oil and gas prices surged, aviation and tourism were disrupted, and financial markets shuddered.^{[775][776]} International Energy Agency (IEA) head Fatih Birol described the situation as the "greatest global energy security challenge in history".^[777]

Energy

Oil and natural gas prices rose in direct response to Iranian threats to attack tankers and other ships and to Iranian strikes on oil facilities in Gulf producing countries.^[779] 20% of global oil and gas production normally transit the Strait of Hormuz.^[780] As the war continued, oil and gas prices ebbed and flowed as markets attempted to assess the likelihood of an end to the conflict. Prices ranged from below $70 before the war^[781] to as high as $139 on 7 March.^[782] Gas prices also rose.^[259]

Toward the end of March significant shortages of domestic petroleum products emerged in southeast Asia as reserves ran out.^[783]

Stock markets initially fell, with the Dow Jones Industrial Average falling over 400 points (one percent) on 2 March alone,^[784] although by mid-April had recovered and reached record highs.^[785]

The UN World Food Programme and various economic analysts warned that the war is driving significant, long-term increases in global food prices.^{[786][787]}

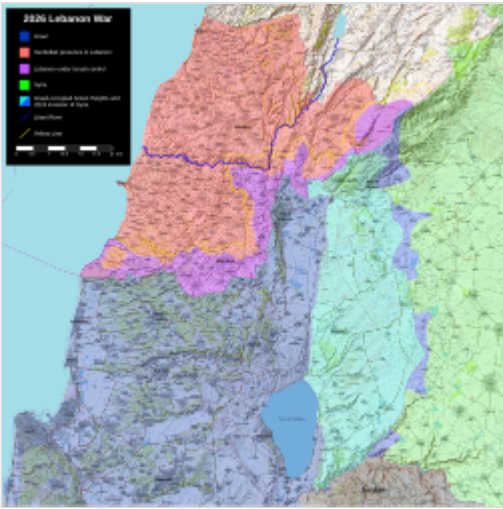

Commodities

Disruption in the supply of essential fertilizers due to the closure of the Strait threatened food production in many countries.^[788] The Fertilizer Institute stated that nearly 50% of global urea and sulfur exports annually transited through the Strait of Hormuz, made worse by the natural gas shortage, which is a key feedstock for nitrogen fertilizers.^[780]

Air travel

Iran's airspace emptied of civilian aircraft during the conflict,^[789] as Bahrain, Iraq, Israel, Kuwait, Qatar, Syria and the UAE closed their respective airspaces.^{[790][791][792]} Some carriers suspended service to the Middle East.^[793]

Spirit Airlines, an American low-cost airline, ceased operations on 2 May 2026, after increased fuel costs from the war exacerbated its existing financial difficulties.^[794]

Strait of Hormuz

Shipping traffic through the Strait of Hormuz, a major maritime choke point for world energy trade, has been largely blocked by Iran since 28 February 2026, when the United States and Israel launched an air war against Iran and assassinated its supreme leader, Ali Khamenei. In retaliation, Iran launched missile and drone attacks on Israel, US military bases, and US-allied Gulf states. The Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) issued warnings forbidding passage through the strait, boarded and attacked merchant ships, and laid sea mines in the strait. Since 13 April, the US has simultaneously blockaded Iranian ports. Until the US–Israeli war against Iran, the Strait of Hormuz was open and about 25% of the world's seaborne oil trade and 20% of the world's liquefied natural gas passed through it.

The Iranian warnings and subsequent attacks on vessels prompted shipping firms to suspend operations in the strait.^{[795][796]} This caused a sharp decline in maritime transit, with tanker traffic dropping first by about 70% and over 150 ships anchoring outside the strait to avoid risks.^{[797][798]} Soon afterwards traffic dropped to about zero. On 27 March, the IRGC announced that the strait was closed to any vessel going "to and from" the ports of the US, Israel, and their allies.^[799] The International Maritime Organization reported on 21 April that about 20,000 mariners and 2,000 ships were stranded in the Persian Gulf due to the closure.^[800] According to Majid Rafizadeh, Iran is violating the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, which it has not ratified.^{[801][802]}

Amid fears of prolonged supply shortages, oil prices rose faster than during any other conflict in recent history;^[803] Brent crude oil prices surpassed US$100 per barrel on 8 March for the first time in four years, rising to US$126 per barrel at their peak.^{[798][804][805][806]} The largest-ever monthly increase in oil prices occurred in March 2026.^[807] The closure of the strait has been the largest disruption to world energy supply since the 1970s energy crisis^[808] as well as the largest in the history of the world oil market.^[809] Other commodity markets to suffer supply disruption and price increases due to the crisis include aluminum,^[810] fertilizer,^[811] and helium.^{[812][813]}

On 9 March, US president Donald Trump falsely claimed that Iran's military had been destroyed and that the strait was open, saying that the US might seize control of it from Iran.^[814] On 15 March, he called on NATO members and China to help to reopen the strait.^[815] In late March and early April, Trump repeatedly threatened to destroy Iran's infrastructure if it did not reopen the strait.^[816] On 8 April, a temporary ceasefire between Iran and the US was agreed and was to involve the reopening of the strait. However, Iran began controlling traffic through the strait and charging tolls of over $1 million per ship.^[817] Following the failure of the Islamabad Talks, the US Navy itself began to blockade Iranian ports from 13 April.^{[818][819]} The situation was described by The Guardian as a "dual blockade", with the US Navy blockading Iran and Iran blockading the Gulf.^[820]

On 17 April, due to an Israel–Lebanon ceasefire agreement, Iran announced that the Strait of Hormuz would be open to commercial shipping during the truce. Despite this, the US continued its blockade of Iran,^[821] and Iran reimposed restrictions as a result.^{[822][823][824]} On 4 May, Trump launched Operation Project Freedom, a US Navy mission to escort merchant ships out of the Gulf. The Iranian military warned that this would be a ceasefire violation.^[825] On 6 May, President Trump announced a temporary pause in the US military's "Project Freedom" operation to reopen the Strait of Hormuz, indicating "great progress" toward a possible agreement with Iran. The operation will be delayed briefly to assess the potential for a "complete and final agreement" with Iran.^[826]

Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb

Houthi-controlled Yemen threatened shipping in the Gulf of Aden and Red Sea. Its threats had been suspended since 10 October 2025.^[827] March threats by Houthi leader Abdul-Malik al-Houthi had not stopped Red Sea traffic as of mid-April, although traffic remained under historic levels after crashing in 2024 as a result of Houthi attacks.^[828] On 15 March, the Associated Press reported that the weapons stockpile of the Houthis was running low from repeated attacks on Israel, while Iran had not been able to resupply them, because of the war.^{[829][830]}

The Strait of Hormuz highlighted by a red box, at the entrance to the Persian Gulf

Internet infrastructure

Three Amazon Web Services data centers in the United Arab Emirates were struck and damaged as a result of drone strikes, leading to outages of web infrastructure within the Middle East,^[831] causing "sparks and fire" as well as "major structural damage" for 2 of the centers, with internal water levels reaching up to 4 cm, worsened by the failure of cooling and air systems. Fundamental web infrastructure including S3 storage, EC2 compute and DynamoDB databases suffered complete outages in early March.^[832] Iran shut down Internet access for its people throughout the war.^[833] Users who took the potentially fatal risk of smuggling Starlink terminals into the country retained some access.

Military costs

US military costs were estimated at $25-35 billion as of early April.^[834] Israeli costs were estimated at $11 billion.^[835] Costs to the Iranian economy were estimated at $40-50 billion, around 10% of GDP.^[836] The monetary costs of Iranian attacks were much lower than the costs of neutralizing them: PATRIOT and THAAD interceptors are $4 million and $12 million, respectively, as opposed to $50,000 for a Shahed drone.^[372]

Reactions

Iran

Iran's Foreign Ministry vowed a response as Iranian forces struck US bases across the Persian Gulf.^{[837][838]} The Supreme National Security Council said Iran was targeted by a "brutal air operation" carried out by the US and Israel, saying: "This occurred once again during negotiations, and the enemy imagines that the resilient Iranian nation will surrender to their petty demands through these cowardly actions."^[839] Iranian foreign minister Abbas Araghchi called the attacks "wholly unprovoked, illegal, and illegitimate" and said attacks by Iran will continue until as long as they are defending.^{[840][841]} Vice President Aref stated that the path to social justice will not be resisted or stopped by any missile attack.^[842] Iranian president Masoud Pezeshkian said that if the US and Israel are not held accountable for their actions "global order will be shaken".^[843] Pezeshkian said that US should take their unconditional surrender demand "to their grave".^[844] He initially apologized for the attacks on neighboring nations, blaming "miscommunication in the ranks".^{[844][845]} Later he said that Iran had to target countries whose territory was used to attack Iran.^[846] Iranian officials rejected Trump's attempt to insert himself into the government's succession plans.^[847]

On 19 March, Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesperson Esmail Baghaei accused the US and Israel of "terrorist acts" over the deaths of top figures, calling the attacks an "illegal war". He said that Australia's military assets were legitimate targets, over the deployment of a surveillance aircraft along with personnel to the UAE.^{[848][849]} On 20 March, Abolfazl Shekarchi warned US and Israeli personnel that Iran was tracking the movements of "officials, commanders, and pilots" beyond active conflict zones and warned that public and recreational locations would no longer be safe for them.^[850] Iran denied targeting Azerbaijan, Turkey and Oman, blaming "Israeli false flag" attacks.^{[851][852]}

Vice president Mohammad Reza Aref described the alleged use of a bunker-buster bomb in an attack on the university as a "symbol of Trump's madness and ignorance".^[853] Deputy foreign minister Kazem Gharibabadi condemned what he called the repeated targeting of historical and cultural sites in Iran as "an assault on part of Iran's civilizational identity".^[854] Araghchi labeled the strike on a Tehran fuel depot as "ecocide".^[855] The Iranian government declared it had lifted import/export rules and restrictions,^[856] and announced that fuel and medicine were readily available.^[857] The national post temporarily paused parcel delivery.^[858] All sporting events were canceled. Iranian hajj pilgrims returned by land.^[859]

Media coverage

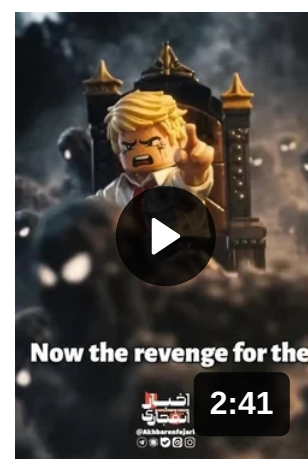

Background

Before hostilities erupted, media attention on US-Iran tensions increased in early 2026, following failed nuclear talks and domestic unrest in Iran. Iranian state media, such as the IRNA, portrayed these developments as provocations.^[860]

Disinformation and propaganda

Iranian state-controlled outlets have been described as employing propaganda techniques, including the use of AI-generated videos (such as those produced by Explosive Media) and inflated casualty figures.^[861] Trump has accused Iran of using artificial intelligence as a "disinformation weapon."^[862] Iranian media broadcast manipulated images of alleged victories, prompting fact-checking from organizations like NewsGuard.^[863] The Iranian government responded to the Trump administration's use of video game clips, cartoon characters, and blockbuster movie scenes for Iran messaging with an AI-generated propaganda video mimicking Lego animation, produced by the Revayat-e-Fath Institute and redistributed on various government-run outlets, including redistribution by the Iranian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The video declares itself in remembrance of the Minab school attack and showcases Iran attacking various of its neighbours and American-Israeli outposts.^{[864][865]}

Rumors that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had been killed in Iranian attacks were circulating widely on social media and were amplified by Iranian state-controlled outlets.^{[866][867]} Users claimed that footage of Netanyahu speaking at a press conference on 13 March 2026 was AI-generated, citing alleged anomalies such as a "sixth finger."^[868]

Impact

Coverage of the war strained journalistic resources, with reports of targeted attacks on media infrastructure.^[869]

Israel

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the goal of the strikes was to "remove the existential threat posed by the terrorist regime in Iran", stating that "our joint action will create the conditions for the brave Iranian people to take their destiny into their own hands."^[870] Foreign minister Gideon Sa'ar said that military action against Iran was urgently needed "despite the significant risks involved", adding that "delay would have allowed the Iranian regime to reach a level of immunity for its nuclear programme, as well as to engage in the mass production of long-range ballistic missiles".^[871] Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was the first to report and celebrate the assassination, stating "for 47 years, the Ayatollah regime has chanted 'Death to Israel' and 'Death to America.' It has spilled our blood, murdered many Americans, and slaughtered its own people."^[872] Defense Minister Israel Katz celebrated the killing, stating "he who acted to destroy Israel – has been destroyed ... Justice has been served, and the axis of evil has suffered a mortal blow."^[873] On 29 March, Yuli Edelstein said that the strikes had set Iran back by years, but they had not yet succeeded in removing the Iranian threat.^[874] Opposition leaders also supported the strikes.^[875]

A March 2026 survey by the Israel Democracy Institute (IDI) found that 82% of the Israeli public supported ongoing military operations, including 93% of Jewish Israelis and 26% of Arab Israelis.^[876]

Media coverage

Background

Before hostilities erupted, media attention on US-Iran tensions increased in early 2026, following failed nuclear talks and reports of Iranian domestic unrest. Outlets such as CNN and The New York Times detailed US military buildups in the region, speculating about possible attacks.^[877] Israeli broadcasters focused on the threats posed by Iranian proxies such as Hezbollah.^[860]

Disinformation and propaganda

Rumors that Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had been killed in Iranian attacks were circulating widely on social media and were amplified by Iranian state-controlled outlets.^{[866][867]} Netanyahu responded by posting several videos, including one filmed in a Jerusalem cafe in which he sarcastically declared that he was "dying for coffee" while holding up a cappuccino and holding up his hands to show that he had five fingers.^[878] The cafe video itself quickly became the subject of fresh rumors, with some social media users and commentators claiming that it too was AI-generated or a deepfake. The cafe later released images as evidence that Netanyahu had visited.^{[879][880]}

United States

President Donald Trump said the US attack on Iran was "to prevent this very wicked, radical dictatorship from threatening America"^[881] and to eliminate "imminent threats" from Iran, adding: "For 47 years, the Iranian regime has chanted 'Death to America' and waged an unending campaign of bloodshed and mass murder, targeting the United States, our troops and the innocent people in many, many countries".^[882] He suggested that regime change

was an aim, and called for Iranians to overthrow their government.^[883] Trump also said that talks with Iran will be easier following the assassination of Ali Khamenei.^[884] When Iran responded by closing the Strait of Hormuz and launching strikes against Arab Gulf allies, Trump said nobody had warned him and "Nobody expected that. We were shocked". It was later revealed that the president had been told of this likely Iranian retaliation.^[885]

Trump wrote on 6 March: "There will be no deal with Iran except UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER!"^[886] On 9 March, Trump said that "the war is very complete, pretty much", and falsely claimed the Iranian military had been destroyed and the Strait of Hormuz had re-opened.^[887] Five days later, he called for US allies and China to send warships to help re-open the strait.^[888] Trump went on to claim that the US and Israel had "won" the war several times, while continuing to say that the US had not yet completed its objectives.^{[889][890]} He denied that he had ever called for regime change.^[891] The president also repeatedly claimed that Iran's military had been destroyed, despite it continuing to launch attacks.^{[892][893]}

In late March and early April, Trump repeatedly gave ultimatums to Iran, threatening to destroy Iran's civilian infrastructure and bombing it "back to the Stone Ages" if it did not make a deal with the US and re-open the Hormuz strait.^[894] On 7 April, the president threatened that "a whole civilization will die tonight".^{[895][896]} Following the failed Islamabad Talks, Trump said that he "doesn't care" about negotiations,^[897] and announced that the US itself would impose a naval blockade of Iran from 13 April.^[898] Trump said on 17 April that the Hormuz strait is "COMPLETELY OPEN",^[889] but on 23 April Trump claimed that he is the one keeping it closed, because opening it would allow Iran to make "$500 million a day".^[899]

Reactions inside the US were overall negative but split along party lines, with the majority of Republicans supporting the war and the majority of Democratic and independent voters opposing it.^{[900][901]} Pundits split similarly, although some notable right-wing pundits such as Matt Walsh opposed it.^[902]

Media coverage

Background

Before hostilities erupted, media attention on US-Iran tensions increased in early 2026, following failed nuclear talks and reports of Iranian domestic unrest. Outlets such as CNN and The New York Times detailed US military buildups in the region, speculating about possible attacks.^[877]

As the airstrikes began, initial reporting relied heavily on satellite imagery and official briefings. The Pentagon's announcements of the destruction of Iranian assets were widely echoed, but independent verification proved difficult due to Tehran's communications restrictions.^[903]

Disinformation and propaganda

The White House faced backlash over a video that mixed real war footage with video game clips.^[863] Critics said such efforts distorted public understanding.^[904] The Trump administration's use of copyrighted video game clips, cartoon characters, and blockbuster movie scenes for Iran messaging risked turning war into entertainment and a spectacle.^[905]

The White House circulates videos fusing real airstrike footages with visuals from video games and action movies, "transforming acts of destruction into a spectacle of national triumph", keeping the audience detached from the human suffering it produces.^[906] A video from the White House drew widespread criticism and bewilderment. Another clip used Kesha's song "Blow" under the footage of an airstrike, which prompted the singer to protest against the "perverts".^[907] Blase Cupich, an American Catholic Cardinal who is close with Pope Leo XIV, referred to a video released by the White House of attacks on Iran mixed with Hollywood film clips as "horrifying" and "sickening".^[908]

United States media and government

On 14 March 2026, Federal Communications Commission Chairman Brendan Carr, a Trump appointee, warned broadcasters that those who "perpetrate fake news and distort the news" must "take the right course" or risk losing their licenses at renewal.^{[909][910]} Carr said broadcasters "must act in the public interest, and if they don't, they will lose their licenses," citing the public's low trust in legacy media and past election coverage problems. Trump expressed that he was "enthusiastic" about Carr's stance.^[911]

Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth also criticized the coverage during a news conference, taking issue with CNN's reporting and suggesting emphasizing Iranian frustration rather than adding to the headlines.^[912] Democratic lawmakers condemned the FCC's remarks as unconstitutional censorship, with many calling it "oppressive" and a violation of the First Amendment.^[913]

Impact

Coverage of the war influenced public opinion, with the US public showing mixed support amid economic concerns.^[914]

Criticism

Analysts accused Western media of failing to challenge the official narrative, with Mondoweiss highlighting the flattering language that downplayed civilian casualties.^[904] Al Jazeera noted the overrepresentation of voices from the pro-war Iranian diaspora.^[915] Pre-war coverage was also marred by inadequate public warnings.^[916]

International

The IAEA Board of Governors convened an emergency meeting as requested by the Russian Federation on 2 March.^[917] IAEA expressed "deep concern" amid attacks on Iranian nuclear facilities, including the Bushehr Nuclear Power Plant.^[918] The head of the World Health Organization condemned the attacks. The secretary general of Amnesty International described such actions as potential war crimes.^[919]

According to the founding chief prosecutor of the International Criminal Court (ICC) Luis Moreno Ocampo, the war was comparable to Russia's war in Ukraine, adding that the world is going from a "rules-based system" to the "rule of the man", which was "not a viable world".^[920]

European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen and Council President Antonio Costa called the conflict "greatly concerning" and urged restraint.^[921] On 1 March 2026 Von der Leyen advocated a "credible transition" of power.^{[922][923]} After Trump's threats to destroy Iranian infrastructure if the Strait of Hormuz was not reopened on

5 April,^[924] Costa denounced "any targeting of civilian infrastructure, namely energy facilities" as illegal and called for a diplomatic solution only.^[925]

A spokesperson stated that NATO was closely watching, while a senior official stated that NATO's vigilance was heightened.^{[926][927]} NATO secretary general Mark Rutte said that Europe is supportive of the war, as Iran was a threat.^[928] He also said that he felt that the US "knows what it is doing".^[929]

Some countries expressed support for the Israeli–United States actions, including Argentina, Ukraine, Albania,^[930] the Czech Republic,^[931] Kosovo,^[930] North Macedonia,^[930] Paraguay,^[932] and Papua New Guinea,^[933] among other countries which made less explicit statements of support.^[934]

The war was condemned by progressive and left-wing parties, as well as trade unions, anti-war organizations, and some far-right parties worldwide. Some far-right movements at the European Conservatives and Reformists Group (such as AfD, Vlaams Belang, ANO, National Rally, Brothers of Italy, etc.) criticized the war as against international law and the national interests of European countries, while others (such as Vox, Reform UK, Fidesz, Law and Justice) supported the actions in the name of the free world.^{[935][936]}

After initially opposing war, on 16 March, Gulf countries urged the US to neutralise Iran due to Iranian strikes on their territories.^{[937][938]} On 19 March, several Arab states asked for a discussion in the UN Human Rights Council to discuss Iran's strikes on civilians and energy infrastructure in the region.^{[939][940]}

Iran's retaliations were condemned by Bahrain, Cyprus, Egypt, India, Kuwait, the Palestinian Authority, Qatar,^[921] Saudi Arabia,^[941] Syria, Turkey,^[942] the UAE,^[921] as well as by several other EU countries,^[943] and France, Germany, and the United Kingdom, who issued a joint declaration. The United Kingdom permitted the US to use British military bases for defensive purposes. Portugal permitted the US to use Lajes Field for defensive purposes, and France sent its aircraft carrier towards the Mediterranean.^[942] Ireland,^[944] Slovenia,^[943] and Vatican City.^[945] In addition to condemnations,^[943] Spain denied the use of its military bases for US flights connected to the offensive.^[946] On 20 March 2026, the UK approved the US to use British bases to attack Iranian missile sites targeting vessels in the Strait of Hormuz.^[947]

Canada abstained from joining in US-led Israel war in Iran. On 5 March 2026, France authorized the use of French bases. Mixed reactions or calls for peace were made by South Africa,^[948] Azerbaijan,^[949] Lebanon.^{[950][951][921]}

In Pakistan, the army was deployed to suppress an escalation of violence during pro-Iranian protests in the northern cities of Gilgit and Skardu, especially after Shiite demonstrators attacked on 1 March the offices of the UN Military Observer Group at Azad Kashmir. Similar action was taken in Sindh during the attack on the US consulate in Karachi.^[952] There have been movements between Saudi Arabia and Pakistan due to the Strategic Mutual Defence Agreement between both countries, as it "states that any aggression against either country shall be considered an aggression against both".

On 11 March 2026, the United Nations Security Council passed Resolution 2817, sponsored by Bahrain, which called for Iran to stop its attack on Gulf states and condemned the strikes as a violation of international law. The resolution did not mention US–Israel strikes on Iran and Lebanon.^{[953][954]}

Message (in Greek) from President of Cyprus, Nikos Christodoulides, following the first Iranian strikes on Cyprus on 2 March 2026

Media coverage

Initial coverage in Arab media, including Al Jazeera, emphasized the risks of regional spread, citing attacks on Gulf states. Al Jazeera noted the overrepresentation of voices from the pro-war Iranian diaspora in Western media.^[915]

Diplomatic efforts

On March 1, 2026, Trump claimed that Iranian leaders wanted to resume negotiations and that he had agreed.^[955] The late Ali Larijani, Secretary of the Supreme National Security Council of Iran, ruled out talks.^{[956][957]} Trump then wrote, on March 6: "There will be no deal with Iran except UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER!"^[958] On March 21, it was reported that the US was preparing for peace talks, with six demands. However, Iran refused to negotiate, and had previously rejected several of the demands.^{[959][960]}

On March 23, Trump postponed the ultimatum he had given on reopening the Strait of Hormuz, citing "very good and productive conversations" with Iran.^[961] He said the US had been speaking to "a top person" in Iran.^[962] IRGC-affiliated Fars News reported that no negotiations had taken place.^[961] Tasnim News Agency, affiliated with the IRGC, suggested that the US was trying to sow division within Iran by proposing secret talks with only part of its political establishment.^[963] Iran International, affiliated with the Iranian opposition, suggested that Trump was deliberately being vague and not naming which Iranians were negotiating, as a way to sow mistrust and division within the Iranian regime.^[962] The Iranian foreign ministry said it was reviewing US proposals sent through mediators.^[964]

Ebrahim Zolfaghari, spokesman for Khatam al-Anbiya Central Headquarters, rejected negotiations and said the US must accept "that regional stability is guaranteed by Iran's armed forces".^[965]

On March 25, Pakistani officials passed on a "15-point proposal" from the US to Iran.^[966] The US proposal included an end to Iran's nuclear program, limits on its missiles, reopening the Strait of Hormuz, restrictions on Iran's support for armed groups, and sanctions relief for Iran. The Iranians rejected the proposal. The Iranians issued a "5-point counter-proposal", including an end to US-Israeli attacks on Iran and pro-Iranian forces in Lebanon and Iraq, security guarantees to prevent future Israeli and US aggression, war reparations, and international recognition of Iranian sovereignty over the Strait of Hormuz.^[967] The US rejected the proposal.^[968]

In early April Trump threatened to destroy Iran's power plants, oil wells and desalination plants if a deal was not reached "shortly" and the strait not reopened "immediately".^[969] On the same day, Iranian parliament speaker Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf said that Iran would not give in to "surrender" terms from the US. He accused Washington of sending mixed signals, saying, "The enemy publicly sends messages of negotiation and dialogue, and in secret plans for a ground attack".^[970] On March 30, the Iranian foreign ministry acknowledged they had been holding indirect talks with the US through Pakistani intermediaries.^[971] By contrast, Qatar declined an offer to lead the negotiations.^{[972][973]}

Trump claimed on April 1 that Iran had just asked the US for a ceasefire. He said the US would consider it once the Strait of Hormuz was "open, free, and clear".^[969] The IRGC separately said that strait "will not be opened to the enemies of this nation".^[969] On April 5, Trump again threatened to attack Iran's power plants and bridges if the Hormuz Strait was not reopened. The following day, indirect talks in Islamabad led to a proposal for a 45-day ceasefire. Iran declined, calling for a permanent solution. An Iranian proposal, included a protocol for reopening the strait, an end to all conflicts, the lifting of sanctions, and reconstruction. Later that day, Trump said "They made a ... significant proposal. Not good enough...."^[974] On April 7, Trump threatened, "A whole civilization will die tonight, never to be brought back", if Iran did not reach an agreement with the US.^{[975][976]} Administration officials later confirmed the post was improvisational, and not part of a national security plan.^[977]

Analysis

Military analysts have generally described Iran as being more resilient to US-Israeli attacks than anticipated, and have identified several unanticipated consequences of the attacks for US global interests, chiefly the disruption of international trade brought about by Iran's closure of the Strait of Hormuz. Many experts argue that the war is illegal under US law,^[978] a claim that the Trump administration has rebuked, citing the precedent of unauthorized military actions by prior presidential administrations.^[979] In international criminal law, experts have identified the attacks as a crime of aggression,^{[980][981]} specifically as a war of aggression.^{[982][983]} Numerous critics and analysts identified the US-Israeli attack with a more open embrace of expansionism^{[984][985]} and imperialism by the Trump administration,^{[986][987]} and a departure from the norms of the liberal international order.^[988]

Accessed 29 April 2026. "With a ceasefire in Iran taking effect early Wednesday morning, the full scope of the Israeli-American 40-day campaign against the Islamic Republic began to emerge.... Iran, during the fighting, launched some 650 ballistic missiles at Israel. According to the military, more than half of the missiles carried cluster bomb warheads, which spread bomblets indiscriminately over wide areas. The missile attacks killed 20 Israeli civilians and foreign nationals in Israel, along with four Palestinians in the West Bank.... In all, at least 16 missiles carrying conventional warheads — with hundreds of kilograms of explosives — struck populated areas in Israel, causing extensive damage. There were also some 50 incidents of missiles carrying cluster bomb warheads hitting populated areas, with hundreds of separate impact sites.... All 24 fatalities from Iran's missile attacks were civilians, and all but two were not inside bomb shelters. Cluster munitions killed 10, and conventional missiles killed 14."

Truganini (c. 1812 – 8 May 1876) was an Aboriginal Tasmanian woman of the Nuenonne people who was once widely described as the last surviving Aboriginal Tasmanian. She grew up on Bruny Island and saw the death and displacement of much of Tasmania's Aboriginal population during the Black War. She accompanied George Augustus Robinson as a guide on expeditions that resulted in the exile of Tasmania's remaining Aboriginal population; Truganini herself was exiled to the Wybalenna Aboriginal Establishment after the expeditions in 1835. She spent a period in the Port Phillip District (modern-day Victoria) where she was tried and acquitted for involvement in the murder of two whalers. She was later moved to Oyster Cove, where by 1872 she was the only Aboriginal resident left and was mythologised as the last of her race. The narrative that Truganini was the last Aboriginal Tasmanian is rejected by scholars and by the contemporary Aboriginal Tasmanian community. She has become a symbol of what some have characterised as the genocide of Indigenous Australians. (Full article...)

Euphrosyne Parepa-Rosa (7 May 1836 – 21 January 1874) was a British operatic soprano who established the Carl Rosa Opera Company together with her husband Carl Rosa. Parepa's aristocratic father died soon after her birth, and her mother turned to the stage to support them. Parepa made her operatic debut in 1855, at age 16, and soon earned enthusiastic reviews in the major London opera houses. In 1867, following the death of her first husband, Parepa married the violinist and conductor Carl Rosa in New York, and they founded an opera company with Parepa as the leading lady. They toured successfully in America for several years. After their return to Britain with ambitious plans for their opera company, Parepa fell ill and died in 1874 at only 37 years of age.

Lesser noctule

The lesser noctule or the Leisler's bat (Nyctalus leisleri),^{[2][3]} is a species of insectivorous bat belonging to the vesper bat family, Vespertilionidae. The species was named to honour the naturalist Johann Philipp Achilles Leisler.

Description

It is a medium-sized bat, slightly smaller than the common noctule. It has a length of 48 to 68 mm (head and body) and a wingspan of 260 to 330 mm. The forearm measures 38 to 47 mm and the bat's weight is 11 to 20 grams. The face, ears and wings are dark. The fur is brown, darker at the base than the tip unlike that of the common noctule which is the same colour along its length. The undersides of the arms are hairy giving it the alternative name "hairy-armed bat". The ears are short and rounded with a mushroom-shaped tragus. The wings are long and narrow.^[4]

Distribution

The lesser noctule is found locally across Europe and western Asia, eastwards as far as the Urals and Himalayas. It is also found in north-west Africa, the Canary Islands and Madeira. The form in the Azores is often considered to be a separate species – Azores noctule (Nyctalus azoreum).

It is typically found in forests, both coniferous and deciduous, but has also adapted to parkland and urban areas and frequently roosts in buildings.

In most parts of its range the lesser noctule is rare, however in Ireland it is much more common, being the island's largest and third most common bat species. Due to the lesser noctule's ubiquity in Ireland, the island is also considered its global stronghold.^[5] In Britain it is known from a few colonies in England and Wales with occasional wanderers reaching Scotland. Threats to its survival include declines in large insects, loss of forest and hollow trees and toxic chemicals found in treated timber in buildings.

Conservation status

Scientific classification

Kingdom:	Animalia
Phylum:	Chordata
Class:	Mammalia
Order:	Chiroptera
Family:	Vespertilionidae
Genus:	Nyctalus
Species:	N. leisleri

Binomial name

Nyctalus leisleri

(Kuhl, 1817)

Feeding

The bats emerge soon after sunset to feed on flying insects such as moths and beetles. They fly straight and fast with shallow dives, often at treetop level. They sometimes feed around streetlights, catching the insects attracted to them. They are most active around dusk and dawn and will travel up to 10 km while foraging.

From Natural History of the Mammalia of India and Ceylon

Reproduction

Lesser noctules usually breed in small colonies of around 20 to 50 individuals but in Ireland they can be much larger, with some colonies numbering as many as 1,000 individuals.^[6] The colony is usually in a hollow tree or building; bat boxes may sometimes be used. The females give birth to one or two young, with twins being more common in the eastern part of the range.

Echolocation

The frequencies used by this bat species for echolocation lie between 25 and 54 kHz, have most energy at 29 kHz and have an average duration of 8.5 ms.^{[7][8]}

Cultural references

An image of the bat is one of the security features of the 2020 £20 banknote of the Ulster Bank of Northern Ireland.^[9]

Wikipedia:About

This is a general introduction for visitors to Wikipedia. For aspiring contributors, also see this guide and tutorial. For other uses, see Wikipedia:Wikipedia (disambiguation).

"Imagine a world in which every single person on the planet is given free access to the sum of all human knowledge. That's what we're doing."
— Jimmy Wales

Wikipedia is a free online encyclopedia that anyone can edit, and millions already have.

Wikipedia's purpose is to present information on all branches of knowledge. It consists of freely editable content, with articles that contain numerous links guiding readers to more information. Wikipedia is one of many Wikimedia projects hosted by the nonprofit Wikimedia Foundation.

Wikipedia is written by human volunteers known as Wikipedians who collaborate with almost no assistance from artificial intelligence. Wikipedia articles can be edited by anyone with Internet access, except in limited cases in which editing is restricted to prevent disruption or vandalism. Since its creation on January 15, 2001, it has grown into the world's largest reference website, attracting over a billion visitors each month. Wikipedia is a multilingual project, with more than sixty-seven million articles in more than 300 separate wikis for almost as many languages. This includes 7,178,785 articles in English, with 274,480 active contributors in the past month.

Wikipedia's fundamental principles are summarized in its five pillars. While the Wikipedia community has developed many policies and guidelines, new editors do not need to be familiar with them before they start contributing.

The quality of content is more important than the expertise of who contributes it. Wikipedia's content must conform with its policies, including being verifiable by published reliable sources. Contributions based on personal opinions, beliefs, or personal experiences, unreviewed research, libellous material, and copyright violations are not allowed and will not remain. Wikipedia's software makes it easy to reverse errors, and experienced editors watch and patrol bad edits.

A short video explaining how Wikipedia works

Wikipedia differs from printed references in important ways. Anyone can instantly improve it, add quality information, remove misinformation, and fix errors and vandalism. Since Wikipedia is continually updated, encyclopedic articles on major news events appear within minutes.

For over 25 years, Wikipedians have volunteered their time and talents to create history's most comprehensive encyclopedia while providing references and other resources to researchers worldwide (see Researching with Wikipedia). In summary, since 2001 Wikipedia has tested the wisdom of the crowd and has found that it succeeds.

To start editing, simply click the Edit or Edit source button, or the pencil icon , at the top of any non-protected Wikipedia page or section.

Press and partnerships

If you're a member of the press looking to contact Wikipedia, or have a business proposal for us.

Thank you for your interest in contacting Wikipedia. Before proceeding, some important disclaimers:

1. Wikipedia has no central editorial board. Contributions are made by a large number of volunteers at their own discretion. Edits are neither the responsibility of the Wikimedia Foundation (the organisation that hosts the site) nor of its staff.
2. Generally, the agent who responds to an email request will not make edits on your behalf.
3. Disagreements with content will not be resolved via email. Use the Edit Request Wizard to propose specific changes to an article.
4. Although Wikipedia was co-founded by Jimmy Wales, he is not personally responsible for our content.
5. If you have questions about the concept of Wikipedia rather than a specific problem, the About Wikipedia page may help.
6. If you want to ask other users for help with editing or using Wikipedia, stop by the Teahouse, Wikipedia's live help channel, or the help desk to ask someone for assistance.
7. If you disagree with an article's content, or are involved in a content dispute, see Dispute resolution.

The links on the left should direct you to how to contact us or resolve problems. If you cannot find your issue listed there, you can email helpful, experienced volunteers at info-en@wikimedia.org.

Help:Contents

This page provides help with the most common questions about Wikipedia.

You can also use the search box below

Or browse the Help menu or the Help directory to find help pages.

For interactive assistance related to using and editing Wikipedia, see the help desk and the Teahouse.

Read or find an article

The Readers' FAQ and our about page contain the most commonly sought information about Wikipedia.

For simple searches, there is a search bar at the top of every page. Type what you are looking for in the box. Suggested matches will appear in a dropdown list. Select any page in the list to go to that page. Or, select the "Search" button, or press  Enter, to go to a full search result. For advanced searches, see Help:Searching.

There are other ways to browse and explore Wikipedia articles; many can be found at Wikipedia:Contents. See our disclaimer for cautions about Wikipedia's limitations.

For mobile access, press the mobile view (https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Help:Contents&mobileaction=toggle_view_mobile) link at the very bottom of every desktop view (<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Help:Contents>) page.

Report a problem with an article

If there is a problem with an article about yourself, a family member, a friend or a colleague, please read Biographies of living persons/Help.

If you spot a problem with an article, you can fix it directly, by clicking on the "Edit" link at the top of that page. See the "edit an article" section of this page for more information.

Edit an article

Contributing is easy: see how to edit a page. For a quick summary on participating, see contributing to Wikipedia, and for a friendly tutorial, see our introduction. The Simplified Ruleset outlines our key policies and guidelines, while the Simplified Manual of Style and Cheatsheet can remind you of basic wiki markup.

Be bold in improving articles! When adding facts, please provide references so others may verify them. If you are affiliated with the article subject, please see our conflict of interest guide.

The simple guide to vandalism cleanup can help you undo malicious edits.

If you're looking for places you can help out, the Task Center is the place to go, or check out what else is happening at the community portal. You can practice editing and experiment in a sandbox.

+ Create a new article or upload media

Check Your first article to see if your topic is appropriate, then the Article wizard will walk you through creating the article.

Once you have created an article, see Writing better articles for guidance on how to improve it and what to include (like reference citations).

If you don't feel ready to fix the article yourself, post a message on the article's talk page. This will bring the matter to the attention of others who work on that article. There is a "Talk" link at the beginning of every article page.

You can contact us. If it's an article about you or your organization, see Contact us – Subjects.

FAQ and interactive help

Answers to common problems can be found at frequently asked questions.

Or check out where to ask questions or make comments.

New users should seek help at the Teahouse if they're having problems while editing Wikipedia.

More complex questions can be posed at the Help desk. Volunteers will respond as soon as they're able.

Or and a volunteer will visit you there!

You can get live help with editing in the help chatroom.

For help with technical issues, ask at the Village pump.

Tip of the day

Time-saving links: the "pipe trick"

Are you tired of having to type long links to targets, and then having to write out most of the link again to hide the namespace? Simply put a pipe ("|") at the end of the link, like so: `[[Wikipedia:Tip of the day|]]`, which turns `Wikipedia:Tip of the day` into `Tip of the day`. This trick also works with parentheses – `[[colon (punctuation)|]]` becomes `colon`, and comma – `[[San Francisco, California|]]` becomes `San Francisco`.

Introduction to Wikipedia

Wikipedia is made by people like you.

This page takes you through a set of tutorials aimed at complete newcomers who wish to contribute. It covers all the basics, and each tutorial takes only a few minutes, so you can become a proficient Wikipedian quickly.

Get started

Policies and Guidelines

There are two methods to edit Wikipedia:

[[Source editor]]

The wiki markup source editor shows the underlying page source code. It works like a plain text file, indicating links and other items using simple code like this: `[[Earth]]`.

visual
editor

VisualEditor is the easier way of editing that works more like a word processor and hides the underlying source code. Links and other items are edited using toolbar and pop-up interfaces.

Simple instructions on how to translate and adapt the outlines are available.

Updates for editors

- The Product and Technology Advisory Council has published draft recommendations on a model that affiliates can follow when contributing to the technical space. Community members are invited to provide feedback on the recommendation until May 8th on the talk page.
- The number of available thumbnail size preferences in MediaWiki is being reduced to three standardized options—Small (180px), Regular (250px), and Large (400px), as part of ongoing efforts to improve performance and reduce strain on thumbnail services. As a result, existing preferences will be mapped to the nearest new size (for example, smaller selections like 120px or 150px will render at 180px, while larger ones like 300px or 360px will render at 400px). The preferences interface will soon be updated to reflect these changes, and users who wish to opt out or provide feedback can do so. [1] (<https://phabricator.wikimedia.org/T424909>)

- From now on, even when a permission expires automatically, users will receive an Echo notification similar to the standard notification for permission changes. There is a difference between this and Global reminder bot in that the latter reminds users a week before the rights are due to expire, so that they can renew the rights.
-  View all 32 community-submitted tasks that were resolved last week. For example, the problem where the ULS language selector in Special:Translate would scroll vertically when it shouldn't, has been resolved. Previously, when users opened the "Translate to English" dropdown and typed certain inputs, the dialog would scroll vertically by a few pixels even when there was enough space to display all results. The dropdown no longer shifts unnecessarily when filtering languages. [2] (<https://phabricator.wikimedia.org/T358864>)
- The Global Watchlist, which lets you view your watchlists from multiple wikis on a single page, continues to improve. For example, watchlists for Wikibase sites such as Wikidata now support EntitySchema elements for better tracking. The Live Updates mode now refreshes the special page every 60 seconds to comply with the updated global API rate limits for improved real-time responsiveness. Additionally, a directionality bug that displayed links as "changes 3" instead of "3 changes" in mixed-direction lists has been fixed. [3] (<https://phabricator.wikimedia.org/T415450>)[4] (<https://phabricator.wikimedia.org/T424422>)[5] (<https://phabricator.wikimedia.org/T418091>)

Updates for technical contributors

- The second phase of global API rate limits has been rolled out to reduce the impact of AI crawlers and ensure fair, sustainable access to Wikimedia resources, prioritising human and mission-aligned traffic. Limits have been shifted from per-hour to per-minute, producing smoother traffic patterns and more predictable API load. Community users are not expected to be affected, and no action is required. Early indications show some User-Agent-based requestors are adjusting behaviour, and around 64% of automated API traffic has been identified. Monitoring continues, and Wikimedia Enterprise remains available for commercial support.
-  Detailed code updates later this week: MediaWiki

Sister projects & interwiki linking

If you want to write a dictionary definition, recipe or quotation archive, consider using one of Wikipedia's sister projects, such as Wiktionary or Wikiquote. These are more specialised, as they focus on a particular type of page. Links can be made to these pages by adding the project name as a namespace ("Wikiquote:", "Wikibooks:", "Wiktionary:"), or using the shortcuts ("Q:", "B:", and "Wikt:", respectively). Wikipedia is written by volunteer editors and hosted by the Wikimedia Foundation, a non-profit organization that also hosts a range of other volunteer projects:

Special pages

This page contains a list of special pages. Most of the content of these pages is automatically generated and cannot be edited. To suggest a change to the parts that can be edited, find the appropriate text on Special:AllMessages and then request your change on the talk page of the message (using {{editprotected}} to draw the attention of administrators).

You can also see what message names are used on a page by adding ?uselang=qqx to the end of its URL, e.g. <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Special:SpecialPages?uselang=qqx> will show (specialpages-summary) in place of this message, which allows you to find MediaWiki:Specialpages-summary.

Articles for Operation Epic Fury/Operation Roaring Lion/Operation True Promise IV?

It was previously suggested that 2026 Iran war § First week \(28 February – 6 March\) be split into its own article. This proposal wasn't successful, however, that section remains the largest one under hostilities and a split would help with the article size.

Perhaps it would be warranted to make a separate article specifically for the initial military operations, namely Operation Epic Fury and Operation Roaring Lion by the US and Israel respectively, and Operation True Promise IV by Iran in retaliation, similar to how there's an article for Operation Midnight Hammer which is distinct from that of the Twelve-Day War.

Since the US-Israeli operations were conducted jointly, I'm unsure whether a single article or two separate ones for each operation would be most appropriate. If they would share an article, I'm unsure what the title would be. – Scyrme (talk) 16:06, 9 April 2026 (UTC)

These articles could also encompass some of the prelude, particularly the planning of the operations and the disinformation efforts to obscure preparations, in addition to the actual details of their execution. – Scyrme (talk) 10:43, 10 April 2026 (UTC)

@Scyrme How about this "Operation Epic Fury/Operation Roaring Lion" as one with that exact title. With the slash Avishai11 (talk) 19:41, 10 April 2026 (UTC)

That had occurred to me, but it didn't seem appropriate so I didn't suggest it. There a few article which have a slashed title like this, but I'm only aware of this being done for cases where there's a single topic which officially has a joint bilingual name such as Biel/Bienne or Aoraki / Mount Cook (most, if not all, of these are located in either Switzerland or New Zealand). In general, titles using slashes tend to be renamed to ones without slashes. For example, UV/VIS spectroscopy was renamed Ultraviolet–visible spectroscopy and Sticky end/blunt end was renamed Sticky and blunt ends. I don't know whether this is because there's a consensus or guideline that encourages doing so. – Scyrme (talk) 19:56, 10 April 2026 (UTC)

I understand that this is an old discussion, but in case this ever comes up again (because I like the idea of a separate article in principle), I would add that we have separate articles for eg Operation Odyssey Dawn and Operation Ellamy, even though, like the US-Israeli operations, they were fully integrated into each other. Also, given the fact that predict articles on both operations will be incredibly detailed, it may be good to split them if only because of article size. Cherrytxt E 22:38, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

@Cherrytxt: It's not that old. Other approaches have been taken in the meantime, but this article continues to be large enough after implementing them that it could still benefit from further trimming. Splitting off portions of the hostilities section to make an article or articles about these operations would probably be the most effective avenue remaining for further trimming as the "first week" section is now by far the largest by both bytes and word count.

We still need a workable title to work around. The easiest approach in terms of title would be just give each operation its own article, but this raises the difficulty of disentangling the US and Israeli operations. If that is the route we decide to take, based on the precedent of the articles you listed, then we should come up with a workable approach to decide what content should be split to where, and what should be duplicated between them if anything.

The most straightforward of these operations to split off would be Iran's Operation True Promise IV, but we shouldn't do that unless we have a workable plan for the US and Israeli operations, as trimming only the Iran-related material from 2026 Iran war would leave the article unbalanced. – Scyrme (talk) 22:51, 22 April 2026 (UTC)

I don't object to this at all, as long as there is still a brief mention and explanation of the operations here on this page. HarvardJock (talk) 23:18, 10 April 2026 (UTC)

Is word count and length still an issue on this article? I haven't seen anyone complain about it in a while. Maybe it's not necessary anymore.

HarvardJock H (talk) 21:50, 22 April 2026 (UTC)

The word count is ~12,300 words, which is within the 9,000-15,000 range for the scope of a topic can sometimes justify the added reading material (WP:SIZERULE), however Lfstevens noted that it would probably be a good idea to trim the article down enough that using #invoke to invoke the citation module instead of using citation templates would no longer be necessary. While it makes no difference to how the references appear to readers, tools like Provelt and the citation expander gadgets don't work as intended with references that use #invoke rather than a template, which means module-invoking references generally have to be maintained largely manually.

To some extent, all refs require some manual maintenance as the automated tools don't always get it right, and module-invoking references will still be subject to automatic error-checking mechanisms which are built into the templates since it's the module that implements them, which makes identifying references that need maintenance easy, but certain tools like the two common ones I mentioned only work properly when citations use templates rather than invoking the module. In my experience Provelt interprets module-invoking references the same way as plain text references and citation expander just ignores them completely. – Scyrme (talk) 22:16, 22 April 2026 (UTC)

Understood. I didn't take automated tools into consideration. HarvardJock H (talk) 22:23, 22 April 2026 (UTC)

I don't see the need for splitting off the operations. Gulf War serves as a redirect for both Operation Desert Storm and Operation Desert Shield. If it's truly necessary, the first week can be split off into a First week of the Iran war article. JasonMacker (talk) 15:02, 26 April 2026 (UTC)

That split was already previously proposed and was unsuccessful, as I noted at the top of this section. – Scyrme (talk) 15:31, 26 April 2026 (UTC)

Image at the top

Why doesn't this article have a typical quadrant with actual photos from the conflict? The image as it is conveys pretty much no useful information and at this point. There are so many markets, it's impossible to even discern where they are meant to represent. It's been over a month, surely we have actual images from the conflict now. Dunnowy123 (talk) 12:43, 17 April 2026 (UTC)

I think a more beneficial proposal is to create two separate boxes, one which depicts locations struck and another being the aforementioned quadrant which would include pictures relevant to the conflict. The actual layout of the said boxes would depend on what we want to prioritize, I for one, think that placing the quadrant with the images has to be placed on top of the box with the depiction of strikes. Lothengrun de Spigel (talk) 15:45, 17 April 2026 (UTC)

The technical reason is the `|image=` parameter is occupied by `{{2026 Iran war map}}` and `{{Infobox military conflict}}` only supports a single image. Not all conflicts have a collage of images in the infobox. Russo-Ukrainian war \(2022–present\), for example, also has a map.

It was decided early on to include a map of strikes, presumably because at the time no photos were available on Wikimedia Commons. Replacing it with a simplified map that's clearer to interpret was proposed later, but that discussion ultimately didn't lead to anything being done. Some editors objected to simplifying the map because the map can be opened in fullscreen by clicking on it, allowing readers to zoom in. Personally, I don't think readers should have pause reading the article to open the map to fullscreen to pan/scroll to see the key details, and I argued as much in that discussion. – Scyrme (talk) 16:35, 17 April 2026 (UTC)

Instead of using `|image=` why not use `|map=` for the depiction of strikes and `|image=` for images? Or am I mistaken to think this? Lothengrun de Spigel (talk) 19:08, 17 April 2026 (UTC)

There is no `|map=` parameter. The infobox can generate a map if coordinates are provided to `|coordinates=`, but this wouldn't be the same and isn't suitable for what's needed.

The documentation for `{{Infobox military conflict}}` (which is what `{{2026 Iran war infobox}}` uses) mentions `|mapframe-custom=` which can supposedly accept a template that generates a mapframe, which is essentially what `{{2026 Iran war map}}` is, but that part of the documentation is a transclusion from the documentation for `{{Infobox mapframe}}`; it's not specific to what `{{Infobox military conflict}}` actually supports. In theory, it should support everything described there, but as far as I can tell, `{{Infobox military conflict}}` does not actually support `|mapframe-custom=`. I could be wrong though, since `{{Infobox military conflict}}` is almost entirely actually handled by `Module:Infobox military conflict` rather than by the template itself. I'm not sufficiently skilled in Lua to understand how the module works. If it were just a template I could figure out how it works, but modules are mostly beyond me.

If `|mapframe-custom=` does work, I don't understand how to use it properly. Based on the documentation, it seems like the infobox should display what's provided to that parameter if `|mapframe=yes` is set to allow it to work. – Scyrme (talk) 19:52, 17 April 2026 (UTC)

@Dunnowy123 and Lothengrun de Spigel: I pursued this further over at Template talk:Infobox mapframe § "mapframe-custom" parameter and received a helpful suggestion from The Equalizer, which has now been implemented in the sandbox for `{{2026 Iran war infobox}}`. A comparison between the current and sandbox versions of the infobox can be seen in the collapsible box in the section below. The sandbox version has an image collage in `|image=` and uses `|notes=` to provide `{{2026 Iran war map}}` at the bottom of the infobox. This would allow having both a map and an image collage without having to provide specific coordinates to allow the use of `|mapframe=`.

Note, the infobox has a long list of notes and references which are transcluded with it, which are also contained in the collapsible box. – Scyrme (talk) 16:55, 25 April 2026 (UTC)

Another note, the image collage included in the sandbox is just for demonstration. It's one that's used on Wikimedia Commons, but we don't necessarily have to use it here in this article. We could make a new one or use `{{Photo montage}}` instead. – Scyrme (talk) 16:58, 25 April 2026 (UTC)

- @Scyrme: Yeah the map and pictures look good to me, I don't know if it practical to place the map side by side with the pictures, however, at least it is a step in the right direction, I support merging this template to the main article. Appreciate your efforts @Scyrme. Lothengrun de Spigel (talk) 17:06, 25 April 2026 (UTC)
- Per WP:COLLAGE: Collages and montages are single images that illustrate multiple closely related concepts, where overlapping or similar careful placement of component images is necessary to illustrate a point in an encyclopedic way [emphasis added]. These types of images fail the test of necessary. We are also told per MOS:INFOBOXPURPOSE that less is better. This is already a bloated infobox. It will be bloated even more by multiple images and their captions. Cinderella157 (talk) 00:14, 26 April 2026 (UTC)

It could be argued that a collage would be necessary to illustrate the various facets of the war, such as the civilian impact in Iran, the closure of the strait and its consequences for the global economy, the war in Lebanon, etc. However, I do agree that the collage presently used in the sandbox as of writing this does not do so and so we would need a different collage or `{{photo montage}}` to address the concern about it being necessary in this way.

This would still leave open the issue of a detailed caption bloating the infobox. We could address that by trimming information elsewhere. Personally, I'm not sure we need a list of casualties in the infobox as it's redundant with more detailed articles on the topic which we could simply link to, similarly to how Russo-Ukrainian war \(2022–present\) links to a section rather than repeating a summary. The casualty summary invites frequent requests to amend the list to keep it up to date and pads out the infobox with many additional references, so there's a relatively high maintenance cost to keeping it and it duplicates the effort of maintaining the casualty lists elsewhere. However, I also understand if other editors feel a casualty list is more important than illustrating the many facets of the war. We should also consider that we could trim the casualty list without adding a collage/montage; if our priority is to reduce bloat, perhaps we don't need either (though perhaps that should be a separate discussion to avoid overcomplicating the issue).

To clarify my own position, I'm undecided. I don't know whether I'm more persuaded by the arguments I've presented here or by your original case against a collage/montage. I simply wanted to identify whether there was a viable way to implement the suggestion to present both a map and an image collage, so that other editors could make an informed decision. – Scyrme (talk) 14:03, 26 April 2026 (UTC)

- Moving my opinion from below to this relevant section (this is with reference to a specific collage image):

Support but only to a limited extent: It shouldn't be added into the infobox. That collage imagery is typically something that goes into infoboxes and the infobox is already long enough as it is. Furthermore, the infobox already has the map with the strike locations which I think is highly useful, so I don't support replacing that image with the one you posted. Can you think of a good location to place that image into, within this article? HarvardJock (talk) 22:15, 26 April 2026 (UTC)

HarvardJock (talk) 23:01, 26 April 2026 (UTC)

@HarvardJock: The specific collage image you mention is the one that is currently used in the sandbox here. Per Cinderella157 and my reply, I agree that this specific collage isn't a good fit for the infobox. What do you think about the proposal to have both a collage and map, as illustrated in the sandbox (see the collapsible box above)? It doesn't necessarily have to be that exact collage. If length is your main concern, how do you feel about my suggestion to trim elsewhere? (I moved your post down to the most recent continuation of the discussion to keep things chronological; hope you don't mind.) – Scyrme (talk) 00:26, 27 April 2026 (UTC)

Per WP:COLLAGE: ... is necessary to illustrate a point in an encyclopedic way - not multiple points or facets. Per MOS:LEADIMAGE: It is common for an article's lead or infobox to carry a representative image—such as of a person or place, a book or album cover—to give readers visual confirmation that they've arrived at the right page. The map alone achieves this. It is not the purpose of the lead image to capture multiple facets of the subject. The type of collage you indicate is a photo essay. MOS:INFOBOXPURPOSE tells us not to try to write the article in the infobox (in full or part) and that less is better. The type of collage you indicate is a photo essay. Multiple images crammed into the small frame of an infobox lack visual acuity, create visual noise (clutter) and detracts from the article. I agree with your observation about casualties though. Cinderella157 (talk) 00:52, 27 April 2026 (UTC)

I don't mind at all, thanks for moving it. Regarding the proposed infobox above with the collage and map, I would prefer the map to stay on top (as the infobox currently is). If this means the collage must be discarded, in the case it cannot be put below, then I'm fine with discarding it. As for the length issue, that isn't particularly my main concern, I just find that per policy a lot of users involved here oppose a lengthier infobox - I'd like to respect that. I would assume it's better for readers too. HarvardJock (talk) 00:59, 27 April 2026 (UTC)

@Cinderella157: Facets are aspects of a point. The point would be the scale or impact of the war. I suppose the strike map can communicate the scale, to an extent, though it doesn't really capture the full scale. The impact of a war seems like a reasonable point to make to me, and it's something that can't be done with 1 image. You could argue this depends on how narrowly you interpret what counts as a "point", but arguing the semantics doesn't seem very productive. It would be more helpful to consider what point we think the lead image should make, then consider if a collage is needed to make it. Do we want to make the impact of the war the point? It seems like we do, given that much of the infobox (such as the casualty list) seems intended to make this point, and a `{{photo montage}}` might communicate this point more effectively than a list of numbers.

While you're right that a map is sufficient to provide visual confirmation that a reader has arrived at the right page, the map does not display in previews when hovering on a link or using the search bar, so it doesn't accomplish the aim as well as an actual image would. I'd also note that the language of MOS:LEADIMAGE is phrased as it is common not it should or it must. This is more of a description of how lead images are often used, rather than an exhaustive or definitive statement of what they're intended for. I don't think a lead image's only purpose is to provide a visual confirmation that a reader is on the right page.

WP:P&G is rarely written in emphatic terms. They are nonetheless standards all users should normally follow. The infobox is not the place to tell a story about the the scale or impact of the war or to illustrate the various facets of the war, such as the civilian impact in Iran, the closure of the strait ... through a photo essay. WP is a written encyclopedia not a picture encyclopedia. INFOBOXPURPOSE tells us that less is better. Per MOS:IMAGEREL: too many [images] can be distracting and usually, less is more. So, less is better goes doubly for images in the lead. Cinderella157 (talk) 03:57, 27 April 2026 (UTC)

So then you would agree that the current imagery in the infobox is fine as it is, right? I think you gave good policy reasoning. Overall I'm fine with leaving it as is. HarvardJock (talk) 19:05, 28 April 2026 (UTC)

Yes, I think it is fine. I don't see a compelling reason to change it. Cinderella157 (talk) 22:55, 28 April 2026 (UTC)

Might be a bit strange to have an image at the bottom rather than at the top. -

Right, that was my concern as well even if permissible. Frankly, I'm fine with the infobox imagery as it is. If the collage picture is never added then that's fine by me too. The only thing I oppose is adding the collage at the top of the infobox, where the map of the stakes currently is, and moving the map to the bottom. HarvardJock (talk) 02:35, 27 April 2026 (UTC)

Should the infobox be uncollapsed?

In the § RfC about the label for countries struck by Iran discussion closed by Iseult, Iseult mentioned that there was negligible discussion about the collapsability of the others section. Two options:

- A. Collapsed (status quo)
- B. Uncollapsed

Vidanalik (talk to me) (contributions) 19:30, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

Comment - Why is this even a discussion? Jason's proposal, which ended up winning the RfC, does not involve a list that can be collapsed, but a link to a separate article discussing the war's impact. ZionniThePeruser (talk with me | read up on me) 19:47, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

@Iseult Could you clarify what you mean by "Option D" in the close? If you meant the wikilink version then this discussion is moot Placeholderer (talk) 21:31, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

Placeholderer, this is the first I've read about Jason's proposal being wikilinked. Going back through the RfC, Jason makes no mention of such a link; in the thread below, they don't bring it up.

Zionni's citation is to a talk page archive which I don't think is linked in the RfC itself either. Well, this is what happens with insufficient RfC workshopping. In any case, Jason's proposal by no means 'won' the RfC. It's the flimsiest of temporary solutions until discussion can clarify matters. As I wrote in my close, there was no consensus for option D. Iseult ^{Δx} talk to me 21:44, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

I directly mentioned what I meant in the conversation in the RfC:

My intent with Option D, "Others" is not that it serves as a label for countries the way "Attacked by Iran" currently does, but rather the actual word "Others" which can be a wikilink to an article (Impact of the Iran war) explaining the circumstances of various countries impacted by the war. That way, there will no longer be any edit warring regarding specific countries being added or removed from the infobox, and editors will be freed to discuss all countries and how they have been impacted, without needing to justify inclusion in the infobox. And, the infobox will not be cluttered by a bunch of countries that are clearly not directly involved in this war the way Iran, Israel, and the United States are (From here (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Talk:2026_Iran_war#c-JasonMacker-20260328205900-Entropyandvodka-20260328142200)).

The problem with the RfC was that it was initially presented as a binary choice of just changing the label to "Attacked by X" or "Defensive only." I expressed my disapproval in my first comment. The main thing I'd update with what I wrote is that I'm okay with it linking to a section of this article, or some section of another article, rather than a new article. JasonMacker (talk) 22:16, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

Ah. I absolutely missed that in my, like, six rereads. It was buried several replies deep and not mentioned in your !vote. I don't think it's reasonable for respondents to have seen that.

But let's split the baby. The operative word is can, so the wikilink is optional. I did not understand option D to include a wikilink and don't see indications in the RfC above that many D-!voters did either. Iseult ^{Δx} talk to me 22:21, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

That was a clarifying comment. My initial comment made it clear that my intention was something similar to the World War I article's infobox. The basis of my point is that too many countries have been impacted by this war, and so, just like ww1, we should not try to place every impacted country in the infobox, even with collapsible lists. JasonMacker (talk) 22:29, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

I see. I also see that several !votes cited your argument, so those might be counted as support for a wikilink. The trouble continues though with a distortion of your option D in the addition to the RfC options and subsequent misunderstandings of it through that addition (e.g. the proposer of this RfC). What a mess. One workshop could have worked all of this out.

Let me think about how to go about this. In the meantime, I'm open to suggestions. Iseult ^{Δx} talk to me 22:43, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

Thanks for the close, this was more complex than I realized, at least we're moving forward. At Middle Eastern crisis (2023–present), this is handled with a wikilink to Axis of Resistance and footnotes following "other..." (not seeing a discussion there about the "self-defense only" label...), and while I supported JasonMacker's proposal in spirit, I don't support it in practice because I don't believe we have good targets for such WLs yet.

It seems to me there was at least a weak consensus for "others..." given that the overlap in argumentation for both D and E. In the spirit that perhaps I should have stuck to my guns that the previous RfC was not ready for primetime, it seems this new RfC is also jumping the gun by not identifying the scope of the question at hand, which is how, if at all, they are to be listed, of which collapsed vs not collapsed is just one subset of options, just like the label question, and these differences need to be parsed out for participation to be clear otherwise we'll keep seeing comments going for an option that is about the larger question, rather than the narrower one. — BrechtBro (talk) 05:42, 20 April 2026 (UTC)

We should not get hung up on what the correct WL is. It's a fundamental question of whether the infobox should only directly mention the main belligerents, like in the World War I infobox (and others, such as Korean War), or should it try to list everyone, like in the Kivu conflict infobox (and even that infobox isn't exhaustive, and offers a WL to a full list). If the answer is yes, only main belligerents should be directly mentioned then the others can be handled accordingly, whether it is through a single wikilink, or with a footnote that provides multiple wikilinks, or multiple wikilinks, or multiple footnotes, some combination of these, or something else. Asking what the appropriate WL is, or whether other countries should be in a collapsible list, misses that main point.

The main point is that per WP:INFOBOXPURPOSE, "An infobox is unsuitable for nuance or detail and should generally avoid prose or prose-like statements. If information cannot be simply stated in an infobox without explanation or qualification, it probably doesn't belong in the infobox." The nuance of exactly how much each Persian Gulf country has been affected, whether they host US forces or otherwise allowed the US to use their land, sea, or airspace for combat operations, whether they activated their air defenses, etc. etc. is exactly what needs to be excluded from the infobox. This conflict, the Iran war, is primarily between Iran and the Axis of Resistance, and Israel and the United States; the infobox should clearly represent that. Listing a whole bunch of countries whose only claim to fame is that they host US bases and got attacked, despite themselves stating that they want to stay out of the conflict, is useless clutter for an infobox. JasonMacker (talk) 15:14, 20 April 2026 (UTC)

I absolutely missed that For the record I did the exact same thing : Placeholderer (talk) 23:45, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

@Placeholderer and JasonMacker: I see two options. Either we scrap the first RfC, still reading consensus against options B, C, E, and no subtitle, or I'll try to magic my way into an option D variation bartender. If bartender, the interim solution will most likely end up as option A, which is identical to scrapping. Iseult^{Δx} talk to me 23:51, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

I think the RfC might need to be scrapped/treated like a "no consensus", but I'm not confident in that. I do think there'll probably need to be a dedicated discussion on whether or not to keep the other countries listed under Belligerents (maybe three options: list; link; don't list or link).

Thankfully this is, I'd say, a pretty low-stakes issue as far as infoboxes go. Though there does seem to be consensus below against collapsing Placeholderer (talk) 01:46, 20 April 2026 (UTC)

In my view, scrapping the RfC or reverting to the original status quo option A would be the least good way forward. Any variation of D, collapsible, uncollapsible, "Others" linked to a section or article if/when one exists, is far less problematic than option A was, and option B would have been. A separate discussion/RfC about whether to have the Others list at all sounds more productive than relitigating "Why not Option A", which was opposed by a majority of participants. entropyandvodka | talk 01:57, 20 April 2026 (UTC)

Well, seeing as wholesale removal has been brought up yet again below, we might be in a situation where consensus can and will change through a series (ugh) of clarifying RfCs.

Thanks, entropy and Place, for your comments. They are well-taken. I will ask that, in the future, when we have discussions with heavy non-veteran editor participation, that we all be more willing either to advocate for workshops or for the listed options to be accurate. Iseult^{Δx} talk to me 02:11, 20 April 2026 (UTC)

I have to say, as someone who participated in that RfC and supported option D, I did not support a wikilink. I was not aware of anything like that as it was not part of the options listed by the RfC, and no attempt was made by the RfC to indicate that the proposal had been edited or that D referred to Jason's suggestions. I'm not really comfortable with the idea of having my support for D taken as support for the wikilink as I haven't even considered the matter. I would not be surprised if others felt the same. I have understanding that it may be frustrating for some of the editors involved here, but it would honestly be highly inappropriate to consider people supporting D to be anything other than "D. Others" and whatever the comment(s) they made during the RfC discussion says. —Maltazarian | parleyVinvestigate | 02:53, 20 April 2026 (UTC)

That was a problem with the RfC, where the OP didn't formulate the options correctly. Note that initially, it only had options A and B. I posted my initial comment saying I reject both A and B, and the OP responded by adding "Others" as an option, even though it wasn't intended as a "label" the way A and B were. The RfC played out with many choosing D, but some interpreting it as the WL option, but others interpreting it as the label option. JasonMacker (talk) 15:24, 20 April 2026 (UTC)

- Comment - This is a waste of time. Considering this one ended with more confusion than before it, what we need now is a new RfC on with clear "Remove" attack by Iran from Ib or "Not remove". -- ☞ Santa ☞ 22:43, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

- C: Remove Per MOS:INFOBOXPURPOSE, the infobox is for a summary of key facts from the article. It is not a place to try to capture detail or nuance. The key fact as to those that are belligerents are those doing the attacking. There are many countries that have been attacked making this detail and, when they have not reciprocated and become an active belligerent, this is nuance. The infobox should be kept short and simple. The infobox is a summary. Not everything from the article should or must be reported in the infobox. In this case, the TOC provides the reader with a quick link to where attacks have been made. Furthermore, if it is considered appropriate to collapse something in an infobox then it doesn't belong there in the first place. Cinderella157 (talk) 01:50, 20 April 2026 (UTC)
- B. Things really ought not to be collapsed in an infobox unless absolutely necessary. That is the common practice and I agree with it. Also I'm not considering C here as the previous RfC already ended up with loads of options and lack of clarity (what would "trimming" be here?) that caused issues for the close. I want to see options workshopped before RfCs and added to them from the start, not workshopped as the RfC is ongoing (obviously this is a one-sided criticism of those who want C as they didn't get much of a chance to workshop anything before this RfC started, but perhaps that could go ahead and be done in a new thread under this one). —Maltazarian [†]parleyVininvestigate[†] 05:56, 20 April 2026 (UTC)

remove as undue "Iran has an "ambitious" nuclear power program"

This is grasping at straws and beating around the bush in a lead way too crowded and important for it. We should use a concrete evaluation e.g. "There is a consensus among scholars that Iran pursues nuclear latency". Doeze (talk) 20:18, 29 April 2026 (UTC)

I don't necessarily object to this in principle, but to make a case for WP:UNDUE, you should explain with sources that the overwhelming amount of scholarly sources state that "Iran pursues nuclear latency", and that the current phrasing describing the "ambitious nuclear power program" is a significant minority opinion, or fringe, in other words. If the vast majority of sources agree with your statement, list them out, and then state the current phrase is fringe because only a source or two mention it. Alternatively, just be bold and add it in with multiple references, and if a user has issue, they can revert you and we'll continue discussing things here. HarvardJock [†]Talk[†]Contrib[†] 21:40, 29 April 2026 (UTC)

These can both be (and, as far as I know, are) true; Iran can both have an ambitious nuclear power program while also pursuing a policy of nuclear latency with regards to nuclear weapons. The two are not mutually exclusive. I don't think it's controversial to say that Iran has a policy of nuclear latency. As far as I know it's not something that Iran even denies. The main objection would be from those who argue that Iran intends to actively develop nuclear weapons, not merely to maintain nuclear latency, which has been the position of the US and Israel. Regardless of policy, the article Nuclear latency provides multiple references for Iran's nuclear latency in practice, where it states:

Iran is also considered a nuclear threshold state, with its advanced nuclear program capable of producing fissile material for a bomb in a matter of days if weaponized. [See Nuclear latency § Nuclear-threshold states for refs.]

Regardless, the lead does not make it clear why an ambitious nuclear power program is even relevant, particularly as weapons require much more highly enriched uranium than nuclear power, so the latter doesn't really suggest anything with regards to a country's intentions or capacity with regards to weapons. On that, Iran's nuclear power program is relevant to the war in two respects: firstly, it contributes to Iran's nuclear latency, and, secondly, Trump has threatened to attack Iran's energy infrastructure. Neither of these is made clear in the part of the lead in question, though the former seems implied by the context in which it's mentioned.

That all said, the proposed wording wouldn't really make sense as a substitution into the lead to replace the current wording, as it specifically concerns the judgement of the International Atomic Energy Agency. I agree with HarvardJock that the wording there is a consensus among scholars requires very strong referencing; these would have to be references to academic publications ("scholars") not the opinions of journalists. These references would also have to actually state that there is such a consensus explicitly; it would not be sufficient to cite several academic publications that demonstrate the views of individual academics (or particular teams of co-authors), as that would be editorial synthesis (WP:SYNTH).

It would much simpler to address the unclear relevance by just cutting Iran has an "ambitious" nuclear power program from the sentence. This would also help to address § Summary is too long. That would leave:

The International Atomic Energy Agency said that, while Iran has refused to allow inspections of its damaged sites after the 2025 war, there was no evidence of an ongoing nuclear weapons program.

Alternatively, if we agree that nuclear latency is important context to include, we could rephrase the paragraph to:

Though Iran is considered a nuclear threshold state, the International Atomic Energy Agency said that there was no evidence of an ongoing nuclear weapons program, despite Iran's refusal to allow inspections of its damaged sites after the 2025 war.

The initial addition could reuse the references provided at nuclear latency. – Scyrme (talk) 23:47, 30 April 2026 (UTC)

Great points here! Thanks for the detailed explanation. Thinking about this issue in detail, you're right the two statements aren't in fact in necessary contradiction with one another. No objections to cutting Iran has an "ambitious" nuclear power program from the sentence based on how you rationalized it. @Doeze - since you posted about this, would you like to add anything? HarvardJock [†]Talk[†]Contrib[†] 23:55, 30 April 2026 (UTC)

Summary is too long

I think the summary is too long per Wikipedia:Manual of Style/Lead section. It will probably need to be further condensed. BigRed606 (talk) 04:00, 30 April 2026 (UTC)

That's the first time anyone has brought this up. Per MOS:LEAD, what is the ideal length of a summary supposed to be? Also, what do you propose we should trim from the summary to make it better? Personally, I think the way the current summary is more or less perfect, as I'm of the opinion that the detail is quite crucial for such an important conflict. The summary does have multiple references for each claim made, an issue previously covered by another user here - these were trimmed down to reduce the overall length of the article. Perhaps we could do that for the summary - or do you suggest a reduction in text? HarvardJock [†]Talk[†]Contrib[†] 05:50, 30 April 2026 (UTC)

I have no clue. I have little experience for modifying articles for the ideal length for the summary for any of the articles for Wikipedia. I also think the way the current summary is more or less perfect other than that the summary needs some condensing. ~2026-26417-07 (talk) 13:31, 1 May 2026 (UTC)

Then we will leave the summary as-is, for now at least. HarvardJock [†]Talk[†]Contrib[†] 00:47, 2 May 2026 (UTC)

I believe the recommended length is 250-500 words. This article sits around 850. entropyandvodka | talk 16:47, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

MOS:LEADLENGTH only notes that the "leads in most featured articles contain about 250 to 400 words", but this is point is part of a list of "suggestions" so isn't a limit. That 250-400 figure was added in 2023 after discussion on the Talk page, so it's probably reasonably up to date.

However, "featured article" isn't synonymous with "long article". Some FAs are quite short, like Constantine (son of Theophilos). Since 2026 Iran war is on the high end of article length, it can also be expected to be on the higher end for lead length as a lead section should still provide a complete summary of the article's content. It would probably be fine to aim for ~500 words.

It may help to compare the current lead with the article's main content to confirm that the lead isn't stating too much new information, but is instead summarising the main content. A lot of content has been split off; it's possible parts of the lead relate to information that has since been moved elsewhere. – Scyrme (talk) 17:31, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

Like Scyrme said, i think around 500 words. BigRed606 (talk) 18:02, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

Auto-archive duration

Activity has slowed and it's no longer warranted to keep the auto-archive duration as low as just 2 days. Would anyone object to raising the auto-archive duration? Maybe to 7 days at first, then later a month if it's still a manageable length after that first week? – Scyrme (talk) 22:57, 30 April 2026 (UTC)

Support increasing it to 7 days. No objections to your proposal. I think it's crucial we do so, because a lot of edit requests and discussions being made here involve semi-active editors who need time to respond. It's happened multiple times now where the bot has archived active ongoing edit request discussions or consensus discussions. Let's do it. Also: Once enough users agree and you switch to 7 days, please let me know! There's a discussion I need to bring back to this page, but I won't do it yet because the bot will just move it back to archive. HarvardJock🏠 (talk) 23:27, 30 April 2026 (UTC)

@HarvardJock: No need to wait. If there's a discussion you need to bring back you can do so then add {{DNAU}} at the top underneath the section heading to delay archiving for that specific section until enough time has passed. Note, the template must be substituted, not used directly. ie. You would add {{subst:DNAU|14}} to delay archiving for 14 days. See the template's documentation for more details about this.

I've done this before on a few sections to keep them pinned. – Scyrme (talk) 00:28, 1 May 2026 (UTC)

Are you okay with just ballistic missiles being included, since there's no space to include cruise? HarvardJock (talk) 20:27, 17 April 2026 (UTC)

I think the simplest would be to rename the column "missiles", and sum both missile types. galenlgh 21:21, 17 April 2026 (UTC)

✗ Not done - Looking at this a second time, most of the sources you linked for these numbers are not reliable sources. You've linked to X (Twitter) multiple times which is not acceptable for sourcing major event articles like this one and some of the other sources are somewhat sketchy. For instance, the INSS one is not an article, it seems to have charts updating the data. We typically prefer reliable media articles for these things. I also don't think House of Saud and Gulf News are reliable sources on their own, they could perhaps be used as supplementary ones but not the main ones that can be relied upon wholly as standalone for these numbers. I'd like to see what other users think about this topic and the sources you've provided. In the meantime, can you find better sources for these numbers? HarvardJock (talk) 20:09, 18 April 2026 (UTC)

The article already uses the same UAE-affiliated Twitter account as the source for the table data. But if to go second-order...

UAE and Bahrain, an alternative, dated Apr 10: <https://www.arabnews.com/node/2639401/>

The same data for the UAE (537 + 26 + 2256; unsurprising, as the article says their source is above-mentioned Twitter account), and slightly lower for Bahrain (191 + 515).

Israel, at least The Times of Israel source should be valid.

Kuwait, Apr 11: <https://www.arabtimesonline.com/news/kuwait-skies-stay-locked-armed-forces-stay-loaded/>

A few more drones (354 + 15 + 852).

For now, even a partial update would be useful as the article is very much out of date. I'll search later for more sources.

--- galenlgh 15:56, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

In the Arab News source for UAE and Bahrain, where does it give the figures you're purporting? I don't see any numbers in the article you linked... HarvardJock (talk) 20:07, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

'In a post on X, the BDF said Iran has launched a total of 191 missiles and 515 drones toward the Kingdom since February 28.'

'The ministry said that "since the start of Iran's brazen attacks, the UAE's air defences have intercepted 537 ballistic missiles, 26 cruise missiles, and 2,256 drones heading towards the country."

--- galenlgh 20:29, 19 April 2026 (UTC)

Partially ✓ Done - I added in the Israel stats based on Times of Israel (the previous numbers were super outdated given the extent of Iranian attack on Israel and had no references whatsoever) so that one was fine. As for the Arab news article, I still don't see the excerpt you're claiming exists in the article, namely 'In a post on X, the BDF said Iran has launched a total of 191 missiles and 515 drones toward the Kingdom since February 28.' As for the Arab times online source, that is definitely not a reliable source. So overall, I've only updated one of the chart rows because it actually had the accurate information and reliable source.

@Guz13 Assuming you're still willing to take a look and potentially take things over from here, please keep this in mind. Thanks. HarvardJock (talk) 21:47, 22 April 2026 (UTC)

I'm not sure how you don't see the quoted sentences. A quoted web-search for any of the sentences leads to the above Arab News URL (depends on the search engine). The article is titled "Kuwait accuses Iran and proxies of drone attacks despite a two-week ceasefire".

UAE -- Why's the UAE's MoD official (I assume) Twitter account not valid? And if so, considering it's already the reference in use in the table, at the very least it's no worse but it's more up-to-date.

I struck both of them out in your original post since they're now added. I'll take a look at the other ones in a little while. Iran's "destruction of Israel" rhetoric for a third time

Hi DemFail, can you please explain why you expanded and reworded part of the "Iran's relations with United States with Israel" section without any consensus? Please see your edit (https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=2026_Iran_war&diff=prev&oldid=1351757085) and Pachu Kannan's five reverts. [1] (https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=2026_Iran_war&diff=prev&oldid=1351955087), [2] (https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=2026_Iran_war&diff=prev&oldid=1351955946), [3] (https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=2026_Iran_war&diff=prev&oldid=1351956863), [4] (https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=2026_Iran_war&diff=prev&oldid=1351957098), [5] (https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=2026_Iran_war&diff=prev&oldid=1351957234). Achmad Rachmani (talk) 04:51, 1 May 2026 (UTC)

Apologies, did not see that I needed a consensus to make edits to that specific section. The edits I made to the section fall under the following rationale:

1. Adding (arguably) important details and links to relevant English Wikipedia articles. The goal was to adjust the current verbiage with additional relevant content while simultaneously pointing readers to already existing, more in-depth articles on the subject(s). Additionally, some of the background is overly vague in its content or awkwardly worded.

Some examples of edits based on that rationale:

-Adding a link to the Background and causes of the Iranian Revolution article when the section was discussing reasons for the revolution. I also added a tidbit about corruption, which is discussed in the article as well.

-Adding general items of how the US supported Iraq, which can found in the United States support for Iraq during the Iran–Iraq War article.

-Added a link to the USS Samuel B. Roberts \(FFG-58\) article to point readers to the specific ship that had been struck; its article includes a more detailed description of the event.

-Re-rolling of the existing content on Iranian proxies/Axis of Resistance into a "new" paragraph, while making minor additions to the content.

2. NPOV: A few statements in this section were arguably not neutral in their verbiage. In my opinion, the sentences that leaned off from being neutral were the sentences regarding Iran's nuclear program and the "Western powers" response, the redundant and less formal sentence on Iran Flight 655 (that deletion has been stayed), and to a lesser extent, the reasons the Iranian government initially became hostile to Israel. The verbiage regarding Iran's nuclear program in this particular section was not neutral by omission of crucial facts. Previous/current verbiage implies it was only the "West" who imposed sanctions on Iran, but in reality, non-Western countries (including China and Russia) also voted to impose sanctions on Iran at multiple UNSC meetings. As such, I edited the verbiage to correctly state the UNSC and the US separately imposed sanctions on Iran.

As for the "destruction of Israel" rhetoric inclusion debate, based on previous archived discussions and the current verbiage in the section, I believe it should be briefly mentioned with a link to Destruction of Israel in Iranian discourse. The current verbiage of "Seeing Israel as an occupier of Palestine" is technically true, but considering the views of the leaders of the then-newly-formed Islamic Republic, that statement comes off as omitting key information/broader context. My original replacement of stating "the desire to destroy Israel for ideological and religious reasons" as a motivation for Iran to break up relations with Israel is both neutral, consistent with other articles' nomenclature, factually correct (albeit admittedly vague), and directs readers to view more thorough content in the Iran-Israel relations article regarding the previously-mentioned Iranian leader ideological and religious views.

I believe the edits I published to the "Iran's relations with United States with Israel" section are fair, but I am open to tweaking of both my originally published edits and the current article verbiage, particularly the "destruction of Israel" inclusion. For the "destruction of Israel" verbiage, perhaps something akin to "Motivated by anti-imperialism, anti-Zionism, and Shia Islamism, Iran severed diplomatic ties with Israel and the United States following the revolution, called for the destruction of Israel, and held the American embassy staff hostage for over a year" might be more agreeable for inclusion. Let me know your thoughts.

DemFail (talk) 07:48, 1 May 2026 (UTC)

I have re-introduced some of the original changes I made. I re-read some of the changes I originally published and some of them could be considered excessive. Left off mention of "destruction of Israel" rhetoric by Iran. DemFail (talk) 02:02, 3 May 2026 (UTC)

I'd suggest self-reverting and seeking consensus, since someone else reverted you. I made a partial revert before being aware this was already under some level of contention. When your edit is reverted, simply changing it back without seeking consensus or engaging in a talk page discussion is not the way to go.

As a note on the content itself, this section might be best off just stating that Iran severed diplomatic ties with the US and Israel and held the embassy staff hostage without going into motivations at all. The motivations of states are complex, non-singular things, and summarizing them so simply and succinctly in Wikivoice seems kind of absurd. There are also issues with the preceding sentence, though those would be moot if reverted. entropyandvodka | talk 10:21, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

Terminated war powers = end of the war?

I saw some news about US termination of the war powers

Should we put this as the end of the war or nah? Foxy Husky (talk) 14:10, 1 May 2026 (UTC)

No, the war powers deadline passing doesn't mean the war is actually over as the Trump administration continues to maintain it doesn't need congressional approval (which is legally dubious, but it's what they assert regardless). It's entirely plausible the US will resume the war regardless of this if the negotiations don't end in a favourable settlement. – Scyrme (talk) 14:34, 1 May 2026 (UTC)

This is definitely not grounds to end the war and declare so in the article or infobox, as anything "official." Trump could easily just restart the attacks and ignite the war once again, despite the congressional termination of war powers. In this case, the war would not be over and be ongoing. The ceasefire description is fine as-is, although a brief mention of the terminated war powers detail is fine for mentioning within the article body, if other users don't object. I'll leave that up to you, if interested. HarvardJock (talk) 01:28, 5 May 2026 (UTC)

> most overwhelmingly refer to it as "the Iran war"

That is likely more convenient so as to avoid an awkward moment saying the name of an ally in a broadcast.

My objective is different, to minimize or marginally indent the number of broadcasts or presentations where the war is presented as bad things falling out of the sky on Iran. Gaskew7 (talk) 14:18, 2 May 2026 (UTC)

Our job is not to influence what sources say, rather the reverse, Wikipedia follows what the sources say. 331dot (talk) 14:25, 2 May 2026 (UTC)

While biased journalism is a valid concern and policies like WP:NDESC encourage the use of neutral titles, reporting has generally not been shy in naming or implicating the US and Israel in this war so their omission in descriptive references to the war like "the Iran war" aren't likely an intentional attempt at obfuscation. More likely, they're just using "the Iran war" because it's shorter than "the US-Israel war on Iran", and it's obvious from context which war is meant by the former. Personally, I'd prefer they abbreviated it to "the war on Iran" rather than "the Iran war", but, as 331dot has rightly said, it's not appropriate for us to try to intentionally influence what the sources say (WP:SOAPBOX). – Scyrme (talk) 14:38, 2 May 2026 (UTC)

Impact in Gulf states

The infobox already lists details of casualties in Gulf states, but a key information that should be listed is the economic loss in these Gulf states (direct as well as projected, if there is any estimate). Z 10:08, 3 May 2026 (UTC)

That sort of information isn't usually included in {{Infobox military conflict}} templates. The infobox is already packed with information. This would be better included in the articles related to the involvement of the Gulf countries in the Iran war, instead of on this article. The short description is already long from what users have been saying, so it's best to include this information on related articles. See 2026 Iranian strikes on Arab countries, or for specific countries involved that faced economic damage, each Gulf Arab country has its own article that discusses its involvement, for example 2026 Iranian strikes on the United Arab Emirates and more similar articles on the matter. War has not been declared by an involved party

The article is currently titled "2026 Iran war" even though no party has formally declared war. I believe that to reflect the most accurate reality, the article title should be changed to something along the lines of "2026 US-Iran conflict". ~2026-26783-28 (talk) 01:10, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

The US never formally declared war on North Vietnam during the Vietnam War. You think we should rename that article too? A formal declaration of war isn't required for a conflict to be accurately described as a war, and most reliable sources do overwhelmingly describe the present conflict as a "war". – Scyrme (talk) 01:22, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

I believe in order to show the most accurate reality, yes, the article for the Vietnam war should be renamed aswell. However, I have decided not to add it to the talk page do to some editors being stubborn and it would be a waste of my time. ~2026-26783-28 (talk) 01:27, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

Apologies for the typo by the way. ~2026-26783-28 (talk) 01:29, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

Note that there was already a requested move discussion on whether the title should use "conflict" or "war". There was a very strong consensus at the time to call this a war. I'd expect that consensus would only be stronger after two more months of reporting describing the conflict as a "war" since then. – Scyrme (talk) 01:28, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

Fair enough, I do however still believe that reporting from media is more important then objective reality from the government. ~2026-26783-28 (talk) 01:32, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

I assume you intended to say that media reporting is less important. Not sure why you think governments determine objective reality. Whoever taught you that governments are objective did you a disservice. Regardless, Wikipedia's policy is to follow independent, reliable secondary sources; the statements of governments participating in a conflict (or lack thereof) are neither independent nor secondary sources even if you assume that governments are reliable by virtue of being governments. – Scyrme (talk) 01:54, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

I suppose I should've worded that better. What i meant to say was, I believe that in a case where the media is reporting against objective reality which is decided in the particular case by the government (by declaring the war). I am absolutely not saying that just because it is a government, it is trustworthy (if you must know, i believe that is probably the least accurate sentence a human can say). Say, in a freak scenario where all the major media begin reporting that Donald Trump magically became a lemon overnight, that is obviously not true, however, you're saying that because the major media said that, it is true and should be treated as true. (Im aware this is probably the worst analogy I could give, but work with me, it is late in my timezone) ~2026-26783-28 (talk) 03:44, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

you're saying that because the major media said that, it is true and should be treated as true

No. That's not what I'm saying. I'm saying that a declaration of war isn't necessary and that reliable sources agree with that assessment, as is evident from their use of the word "war". That so many independent, reliable sources are calling this a "war" should be an indication to you that your understanding of what defines a "war" is unusual. The issue here isn't one of journalists disagreeing with objective reality, but rather it's semantic; you have a particular understanding of what the word "war" means which is not generally shared by other people. – Scyrme (talk) 04:04, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

Infobox: economic damages in the "Casualties and losses" section

At some point someone added economic damages to the "casualties and losses" section. I didn't notice until today as the infobox is so overfilled with info that it's difficult to take it all in when scanning over it.

I've removed this information for the same reasons I objected to the proposal to add more of such information at § Impact in Gulf states, namely that this sort of information isn't usually included in {{Infobox military conflict}} templates, the infobox is already packed with information, and it would be better to present this information elsewhere, such as a table at Economic impact of the 2026 Iran war.

The "casualties and losses" section is intended for casualties and military losses, not vague and disputed estimates of economic damages. If we decide to make a exception to the usual use of the section on this article because we feel this is very important to include, this should be discussed first to establish a clear consensus. – Scyrme (talk) 21:14, 4 May 2026 (UTC)

Thanks for changing, I noticed that too within the article - it was up for some time. Brief mention in this article of that is good but Economic impact of the 2026 Iran war is the main article for that. I've never actually seen anyone put economic damages data in an infobox. Destroyed equipment is okay for infobox inclusion though, if I'm not mistaken, right? HarvardJock  (talk) 00:05, 5 May 2026 (UTC)

It's usually used just for the killed/wounded (eg. Iraq War, Vietnam War), but there are examples including major losses of military equipment too (eg. Gulf War, Falklands War) so it's not unheard of. This seems like a natural extension of including other information about the militaries involved, such as leadership or the strength of forces. Though, notably, the 2026 Iran war does not include information about the strength of forces involved, unlike, eg. Gulf War, so the lost equipment is presented without the context that would allow a reader to judge whether those losses are impactful.

Economic damages is taking it too far though, in my opinion. Any attempt to calculate the economic losses or damages is by necessity a very rough estimate, and can vary massively depending on what you decide is relevant. Do you try to tally the cost of all damages, including to civilian property? What about the cost of lost opportunities as trade is diverted away from the region; does that count? Or do you only narrowly focus on the expense to taxpayers on the public expenditure for the war effort? The answers depend on the point you're trying to make, so there's no single objectively right answer. There are too many caveats for this sort of thing to be adequately addressed in an infobox summary.

This is all before addressing the problem of repurposing a parameter primarily used to communicate the human cost of a conflict and making it about money. I'm aware that the economic costs come with human costs attached, but this is, again, better addressed elsewhere than the infobox. Just having what's essentially a big price tag in the infobox doesn't do anything to convey that point. All it conveys to a reader is that war is expensive, which is neither appropriate for that section of the infobox nor something that warrants such weight that it must be included in the infobox.

I don't object to including this sort of information elsewhere where it can be better contextualised; it just doesn't belong in the infobox. – Scyrme (talk) 02:25, 5 May 2026 (UTC)

I see, thanks for explaining. I agree about the economic damages aspect too, it seems odd to include that in an infobox. Besides, including such information in the infobox opens the floodgates for all kinds of information to be included, making it way too long, against established policy and against user concerns. Infobox looks fine as it currently stands, in any case. HarvardJock  (talk) 02:40, 5 May 2026 (UTC)

United States ship sinking

On the 2nd of may, didn't the United States manage to sink 7 small Iranian boats in accordance with the article below?

Where would you like this included within the article? Can you write out exactly what you would like included? The other question is whether this detail is notable enough for this already-long article. Other editors can chime in on that issue. HarvardJock (talk) 20:32, 5 May 2026 (UTC)

The strikes and casualties section of the 2026 Iran war due to the fact that this is considered a strike, and there were casualties. Information that can be added includes:

On May 4th, 2026, U.S Forces reportedly destroyed six or seven small Iranian boats in the Strait of Hormuz during a confrontation that threatened to break a month-long ceasefire. <https://www.nytimes.com/live/2026/05/04/world/iran-hormuz-ships-navy> The boats were destroyed after they allegedly attempted to interfere with the transit of two (2) United States flagged commercial ships and two Navy destroyer ships (USS Truxton and USS Mason). There were conflicting reports made by both parties of the conflict thereof. claims that "CENTCOM maintains all threats were defeated and that they were successfully opened a 'one-way' passage for standard ships to exit the Persian Gulf." Iran (Persia) claims that the Iranian State Media denied any Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) military vessels were struck. Instead, they claimed that the United States attacked two (2) civilian vessels that were traveling from Oman to Iran (Persia), which has resulted in five (5) deaths. <https://www.cnn.com/2026/05/04/world/live-news/iran-war-hormuz-trump> United States Admiral Brad Cooper also stated that Army Apache helicopters and Navy Seahawk helicopters sank six (or seven, depending on what the sources state) Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) fast attack boats. President Trump stated that seven of these vessels has been hit. ~2026-24829-84 (talk) 13:24, 6 May 2026 (UTC)

Thank you for writing this out! One issue - for a smaller detail like this that wasn't central to the main war conflict, we should have less detail. In addition, are you suggesting that Rubio's declaration that "offensive stage of the war is over" is grounds for considering the war over in this article, like in the infobox, or is this just a simple detail you want added? Specifics are important. Please write out your exact proposed addition. HarvardJock (talk) 03:42, 6 May 2026 (UTC)

@HarvardJock: I think what @2026-27311-20 meant to say is, that the OP has been accomplished [i.e., Epic Fury], but the overall conflict is still ongoing, the US forces have now [apparently] shifted towards "Project Freedom" per Pentagon Officials Give 'Project Freedom' Update in Strait of Hormuz (<https://www.military.com/blockade-showdown-us-warships-force-hormuz-open-as-iran-strikes>). Lothengrun de Spigel (talk) 06:03, 6 May 2026 (UTC)

I see, thanks for the clarification. HarvardJock (talk) 20:45, 6 May 2026 (UTC)

My proposed edit is for the info box to be updated as the war is no longer "ongoing" to the present ~2026-27454-33 (talk) 10:28, 6 May 2026 (UTC)

✗ Not done, then [the] proposal is declined, for the conflict is still ongoing, albeit in a state of tentative ceasefire. Lothengrun de Spigel (talk) 12:05, 6 May 2026 (UTC)

Lothengrun de Spigel explained it best but I'll also add that we typically don't want to overcomplicate infoboxes based on the present state of a conflict that is ceasefire, as these statuses are often formally shifting and the politics of it all make the "technical" or "official" status of things overly complex. The simple explanation for an infobox is temp. ceasefire. If an official, formal peace deal is reached then we can write the conflict is over, and if bombs start dropping again regularly from all parties, then we simply put "ongoing." HarvardJock (talk) 20:48, 6 May 2026 (UTC)

Only the US Congress can declare war. It hasn't done so. Therefore, hostilities in Iran cannot be classified as a War. Remove the word from the wiki if you want it to be accurate. ~2026-27603-87 (talk) 19:19, 6 May 2026 (UTC)

✗ Not done The was a strong consensus for calling this a war and moving the article to this title in the requested move to the present title. The consensus is unlikely to change as reliable sources overwhelming refer to it as a war. (See also the discussion at § War has not been declared by an involved party.) – Scyrme (talk) 19:39, 6 May 2026 (UTC)
